Board 2 - Exploring 'What to who, by who'

Instructions

This board aims at outlining the main issue/opportunity addressed by the research project, the related issues/opportunities, the factors that generated the issue/opportunity, and who they concern.

Please identify and write:
1) the main issue/opportunity at the core of the research project in the grey rectangular field;
2) the issues/opportunities related to the main issue/opportunity of the research project in the first row (green). Write each issue on one white post-it. Add only one issue to each box. The graphic structure provided is an example, you can add more green-grey-yellow columns if necessary;
3) who does this issue/opportunity affect in the light grey box located in the first row. Write each affected being/category on one white post-it. The structure provided is an example, you can add more post-its and arrows if necessary;
4) what are the factors behind each issue/opportunity (identified in the first row) in the second row (grey). Write each factor on one white post-it. The structure provided is an example, you can add more post-its and arrows if necessary;
5) who generated the factors that are behind each issue/opportunity in the third row (yellow). Write each being/category on one white post-it. The structure given is an example, you can add more post-its and arrows if necessary.

Remember:
- Add or delete columns if necessary;
- Use sticky notes to fill in each field, use as many sticky notes as needed;
- Change font size if necessary;
- Colours of sticky notes can be changed and used to connect ideas.
