Tim is currently coediting a series of titles for Ashgate & Palgrave Macmillan on African IR, regional cooperation in the Western Hemisphere, New Regionalisms & public policy in Africa.

Jane Parpart is professor emeritus from Dalhousie where she taught in International Development Studies, Gender Studies and History. She has recently been graduate coordinator at the Institute for Gender and Development Studies at the University of the West Indies in Trinidad and Tobago. her most recent writings have been on masculinities and the new wars; gender mainstreaming and gender, violence and IR theories of (in)security.

The Africa Dialogue Series at Carleton University seeks to promote the better understanding and discussions of current policy issues facing the African continent. Through an informed presentation concerning one of the complex and substantive policy issues facing policy-makers and societies at large in the continent, the series aims to engage students and the wider public in Ottawa-Gatineau in a dialogue concerning the implications of global issues for Africa. The Africa Dialogue Series is jointly organized by the South African High Commission in Canada and Carleton University's Institute of African Studies.
