Duncan Scott
Sociology PhD candidate,
Queen’s University Belfast (UK)

Wednesday, September 28, 1:00- 2:30 pm
433 Paterson Hall, Carleton University*

Duncan Scott is a final-year Sociology PhD candidate at Queen's University Belfast in the United Kingdom. He worked at the Human Sciences Research Council in South Africa between 2010 and 2012 and received a Master's in African Studies from Oxford University prior to that.

This talk takes up the issues of post-apartheid transformation and the questionable justice potential of relational ethics such as ubuntu and reconciliation. It discusses the viability of these ethics in contemporary South Africa by critiquing the work of two Christian development organizations that emphasize a relational lifestyle to resolve injustices in the city of Cape Town.
