

Kroeger College (Global and International Studies) – Assistant/Associate Professor, Preliminary
(Applications Closing Date: January 15, 2015)

Arthur Kroeger College, of the Faculty of Public Affairs at Carleton University, invites applications from qualified candidates for two tenure-track positions in global and international studies, one at the rank of Assistant Professor and one at the rank of Associate Professor, beginning July 1, 2015. An appointment at the rank of Associate Professor with tenure may be considered, depending on the qualifications of the successful candidate.

The successful candidates will be expected to research, teach and supervise students in the field of global and international studies. Candidates may be from any relevant disciplinary background, but must be fully committed in their teaching and research to a multi-disciplinary approach to this field. The Associate Professor, in particular, will also be expected to provide leadership in the establishment and growth of Carleton University's new Bachelor of Global and International Studies.

Carleton University has long-established strengths in the field of global and international studies. Building on these strengths, and on strong student demand for an innovative new undergraduate degree in this area, the University will be launching a new Bachelor of Global and International Studies (BGInS) in September 2015. This degree will be a joint program of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences and the Faculty of Public Affairs. It will combine a multi-disciplinary core course sequence with 12 thematically and geographically defined Specializations from which students can choose. For full details on the degree, please consult the program website: <http://www.carleton.ca/bgins/>. Whilst over 80 existing Carleton faculty will contribute to the teaching of the Specializations, the candidates hired to these two positions will be expected to develop and teach a selection of core courses. For a listing of the nine core courses, please go to: <http://www.carleton.ca/bgins/wp-content/uploads/BGInS-Core-Courses.pdf>. Arthur Kroeger College, where BGInS will be housed, is also home to the Bachelor of Public Affairs and Policy Management and the Master of Political Management programs.

At the time of appointment applicants should have a completed Ph.D. in any area of the social sciences or humanities relevant to global and international studies. Candidates must indicate which two or three of the BGInS core courses they feel qualified to teach. The ideal candidate will have a strong record in teaching and research; this will include demonstrated potential for excellence as a teacher in the identified core course areas and evidence of being able to maintain a successful program of research that is eligible for external funding. Candidates should be committed to a multidisciplinary approach to global and international studies; related global and international experience in the public or private sector will be an asset.

The deadline for applications is January 15, 2015. Candidates should submit applications electronically to Robyn Green (Robyn.Green@carleton.ca) in three PDF files including: 1) a curriculum vitae; 2) a statement of teaching interests, which identifies the specific BGInS core courses the candidate is qualified to teach and includes a teaching portfolio and any evaluations or other evidence of teaching performance as well as a statement regarding their approach to teaching; and 3) a plan for ongoing and future research, a short description of papers or monographs published or in progress, a summary of the doctoral thesis, and links to any publications or some sample publications. Candidates should also arrange to have three confidential letters of reference sent to the e-mail address identified above. All candidates attaining an interview will be asked to deliver a research seminar to faculty and students.

Please indicate in your application if you are a Canadian citizen or permanent resident of Canada.

Located in Ottawa, Ontario, Carleton University is a dynamic and innovative research and teaching institution committed to developing solutions to real world problems by pushing the boundaries of knowledge and understanding daily.
