

BIOGRAPHIES

Sven Biscop is a senior research fellow at Egmont – The Royal Institute for International Relations in Brussels and a visiting professor at the College of Europe in Bruges. Dr. Biscop is editor in chief of the journal Studia Diplomatica and sits on the Executive Academic Board of the European Security and Defence College. He co-organises the Higher Studies in Security and Defence with Belgium’s Royal Defence College and has been a visiting professor at Carleton University in Ottawa and Renmin University in Beijing.

Web page: <http://www.egmontinstitute.be/research/biscop.html>

Heinz Gärtner is professor at the Austrian Institute for International Affairs (OIIP) in Vienna. He has also taught at the Universities of Erlangen (Germany) and Vienna. Dr. Gärtner received a Fulbright Professorship at the Center for International Security and Cooperation (CISAC) at Stanford University for the summer and fall of 2008 and has been a visiting scholar at Yale, Harvard, University of British Columbia and Oxford University. Dr. Gärtner’s recent publications include Die Außen- und Sicherheitspolitik des neuen U.S. Präsidenten (2008), European Security and Transatlantic Relations after September 11 and the Iraq War (Palgrave-MacMillan: Houndmills, 2005), and Internationale Sicherheit - Definitionen von A-Z (Nomos; Baden-Baden, 2005).

Web page: <http://www.oaip.at/oaip/e/page.asp?id=11735>

Bastian Giegerich is a research associate at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), London, UK, where his specialization is European security and defence issues. A graduate of the University of Potsdam (Germany), he was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Maryland, College Park (U.S.) during the 1999/2000 academic year. Dr. Giegerich currently teaches in the Department of International Relations at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He is the author of European Security and Strategic Culture: National Responses to the EU’s Security and Defence Policy (Nomos: Baden-Baden, 2006).

Web page: <http://www.iiss.org/staffexpertise/list-experts-by-name/dr-bastian-giegerich>

Michael S. Goodman is a lecturer in the Department of War Studies, King’s College London. He specializes in the study of intelligence, and has published widely in a variety of academic journals. His book Spying on the Nuclear Bear: Anglo-American Intelligence and the Soviet Bomb was published by Stanford University Press in December 2007. He is currently on secondment to the Cabinet Office, where he is writing the Official History of the Joint Intelligence Committee.

Web page: <http://www.kcl.ac.uk/schools/sspp/ws/staff/msg.html>

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

Gunther Hauser is a senior researcher at the Institute for Strategy and Security Policy (ISS), National Defence Academy, Vienna. After working as a researcher and coordinator in two committees of the European Parliament (Foreign Relations, Security Policy and Human Rights Committee; Transportation and Tourism Committee), he served as a senior researcher at the Austrian Institute for European Security Policy. Since 2000, he has been working at the Austrian Ministry of Defence. He has published on European security policy, comprehensive European security cooperation in Central and South-eastern Europe and the Mediterranean, neutrality, international law, and the Austrian parliamentary system.

Web page: <http://www.bmlv.gv.at/wissen-forschung/publikationen/person.php?id=365>

Don Hubert is associate professor of public and international affairs at the University of Ottawa. For nearly a decade, he led policy development on Canada’s human security agenda at the Department of Foreign Affairs including responsibility for small arms proliferation, natural resources linked to armed conflict, the “responsibility to protect,” and corporate social responsibility. He also served as Deputy to the Chair of the Kimberley Process. His publications include The Landmine Ban: A Case Study in Humanitarian Advocacy; The Responsibility to Protect: Supplementary Volume of the International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty (with Thomas Weiss), and Human Security and the New Diplomacy: Protecting People, Promoting Peace (with Rob McRae).

Web page: <http://www.governance.uottawa.ca/api/eng/profdetails.asp?login=dhubert>

Peter Jones is associate professor of public and international affairs at the University of Ottawa. Before joining the University of Ottawa, he served as a senior analyst for the Security and Intelligence Secretariat of the Privy Council of Canada, and has held positions related to international affairs and security at the Department of Foreign Affairs, the Privy Council Office, and the Department of Defence. Peter is a fellow at the Center for Trans-Atlantic Relations at the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies of the Johns Hopkins University and The Regional Centre for Conflict Prevention of the Jordan Institute for Diplomacy in Amman, Jordan.

Web page: <http://www.socialsciences.uottawa.ca/api/eng/profdetails.asp?login=pjone2>

Markus Kaim is currently a visiting professor at the Munk Centre for International Studies at the University of Toronto. He is a researcher at the German Institute of International and Security Affairs in Berlin. His recent publications include Die Europäische Sicherheits- und Verteidigungspolitik. Präferenzbildungs- und Aushandlungsprozesse in der Europäischen Union (1990-2005) (Baden-Baden, 2007), NATO: Möglichkeiten und Grenzen militärischer Terrorismusbekämpfung (in: Schneekener, Ulrich (ed.), Chancen und Grenzen multilateraler Terrorismusbekämpfung, SWP-S 14, Berlin 2007), Die deutsche NATO-Politik (in: Jäger, Thomas/Höse, Alexander/ Oppermann, Kai (eds.), and Deutsche Außenpolitik. Sicherheit, Wohlfahrt, Institutionen, Normen (Wiesbaden, 2007). Web page: <http://www.swp-berlin.org/en/forscher/forscherprofil.php?id=5061&PHPSESSID=2fca95189f73f7c4833a7384711f17f4>

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

Arnold Kammel is a research fellow at the Austrian Institute for European Security Policy (AIES) and a lecturer for European studies and security policy at the University of Győr (Hungary). In July 2004, Mr. Kammel joined the Austrian Institute for European Security Policy and was appointed Secretary-General of the Institute in 2007. His research focus is on European Security and the European Union’s CFSP/ESDP.

Web page: http://www.oeies.or.at/cms/front_content.php?idart=40&idcat=14

Franz Kernic is currently a visiting professor at Carleton University (January 2007-April 2008). He is a senior research fellow at the Institute for Strategy and Security Policy in Vienna. He also holds appointments with the University of Innsbruck in Austria and the University of the German Armed Forces in Munich. In early 2005, Dr. Kernic was the Centre’s visiting-scholar-in-residence. He was a visiting professor/scholar and research fellow at various European and American universities and institutions. His research focuses on international security, peace and conflict studies, EU external relations and security policy, and European politics.

Web page: <http://homepage.uibk.ac.at/~c40278/>

Lukasz Kulesa is a research fellow at the Polish Institute of International Affairs in Warsaw. He is a graduate of the Law Department of Jagiellonian University (Cracow) and also holds an M.A. degree in international relations and European studies from Central European University in Budapest (Hungary). Since 2003, he has been working as an analyst at the Polish Institute of International Affairs (PISM), dealing mainly with issues of international security, proliferation of WMD, security policy of Poland, NATO, and security policy of the European Union. From 2005, he has been the coordinator of the International Security programme at the Institute. His publications in English include: Poland’s Involvement in Iraqi Stabilisation in 2004 (in: Yearbook of Polish Foreign Policy 2005, Warsaw, 2005), The Iranian Nuclear Crisis – a Test for the New Transatlantic Partnership (in: S. Debski (ed.), Transatlantic Perspectives on Security Imperatives, Berlin: LIT, 2007), and Missile Defence Dossier. The Polish Perspective (in: Points de Vue, Fondation pour la Recherche Strategique, 2007).

Web page: http://www.pism.pl/staff_info/id/31

David Last was a Canadian artillery officer for thirty years, including service with NATO and the UN in Germany, Cyprus, Croatia, Bosnia, and West Africa. His research focus is on peacekeeping and conflict resolution in Africa and the Middle East. He contributes to the SSHRC MCRI on ethnicity and democratic governance, and has a long-term interest in the role of security professionals in conflict management. A graduate of the Royal Military College, Carleton University and the London School of Economics, he now teaches politics at the Royal Military College in Kingston.

Web page: http://www.rmc.ca/academic/poli-econ/personnel/last_e.htm

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

Jez Littlewood is the director of the Canadian Centre of Intelligence and Security Studies (CCISS) at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs (NPSIA), Carleton University. His research interests include WMD proliferation and counter-proliferation, terrorism and counter-terrorism, international security, and intelligence issues. He has worked at the Mountbatten Centre for International Studies at the University of Southampton in the UK and has served as an advisor to the United Nations Department for Disarmament Affairs in Geneva, been seconded to the Counter-Proliferation Department of the Foreign & Commonwealth Office of the UK, and served with HM Forces (Army) in the UK.

Web page: http://www.carleton.ca/npsia/npsia_faculty/littlewood.htm

David Long is a professor of international affairs in the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs at Carleton University. Professor Long has published widely on the history of international relations theory as well as on the European Union and transatlantic relations. His current research interests include the EU's foreign and security policy and also the development of the EU's policy on outer space. He is also working on the concept of interdisciplinary and the early stages of the institutionalization of IR as an academic discipline.

Web page: <http://http-server.carleton.ca/~dlong/>

Mary Martin is a research fellow at the Centre for the Study of Global Governance, London School of Economics and the co-ordinator of the Human Security Study Group, convened by Javier Solana in 2003 to look at EU security capabilities. The group's second report on A European Way of Security was published in November 2007. Recent publications include Human Security: A New Strategic Narrative for Europe (with Mary Kaldor and Sabine Selchow, for International Affairs), A Force for Good? The European Union's Human Security Approach in Democratic Republic of Congo (for Africa Strategic Review), and European Security Discourses Towards the Mediterranean (with Federica Bicchì, for Mediterranean Politics). From 1991-1997, Dr Martin was the European Business Editor for successively the Daily Telegraph and The Guardian newspapers.

Web page: <http://www.lse.ac.uk/Depts/global/staffmartin.htm>

David Mendeloff teaches conflict analysis, peacebuilding and reconstruction, and US foreign security policy at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University, and serves as Director of NPSIA's Centre for Security and Defence Studies (CSDS). He is also faculty associate of Carleton's Institute of European and Russian Studies (EURUS). His research interests include causes and prevention of war; nationalist, ethnic and identity conflict; post-conflict peacebuilding and transitional justice; and national misperceptions and ideational sources of foreign policy.

Web page: http://www.carleton.ca/npsia/npsia_faculty/mendeloff_2001.html

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

Frédéric Mérand is assistant professor of political science at the University of Montreal. His book European Defence Policy: Beyond the Nation State is forthcoming with Oxford University Press. After a short career with the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada, Mérand now works on European security and transatlantic relations; German, French and British defence policies; European integration and regional organizations; and the political sociology of international relations.

Web page: http://www.pol.umontreal.ca/personnel/Merand_Frederic.htm

Costanza Musu is assistant professor of public and international affairs at the University of Ottawa. She was previously Jean Monnet fellow in the Transatlantic Programme of the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence and assistant professor of international relations at Richmond University (London, UK). She has been a consultant for the Military Center for Strategic Studies – Center for Advanced Defense Studies (CeMiSS-CASD), the think tank of the Italian Ministry of Defence, and the book reviews editor of the journal Mediterranean Politics (Routledge). She is currently working on a book on European policy towards the Arab-Israeli peace process that will be published next year by Palgrave Macmillan.

Web page: <http://www.socialsciences.uottawa.ca/api/eng/profdetails.asp?login=cmusu>

Charles Pentland is a professor of political studies and director of the Centre for International Relations, Queen's University, Kingston. He is a past editor of the International Journal. His current research concerns the external relations of the European Union, especially its eastward enlargement, its role in the Balkans, its relations with the former Soviet Union, and its Common Foreign and Security Policy. Among his recent publications are an edited volume, Bridges to Peace: Ten Years of Conflict Management in Bosnia (Kingston: Queen's Quarterly, 2003) to which he also contributed a chapter (“Brussels, Bosnia and Beyond: the EU's Search for a Role in South Eastern Europe”); and The European Union and Civil Conflict in Africa (in: International Journal, Autumn 2005).

Web page: <http://www.queensu.ca/politics/faculty/regular-faculty.php?bioID=21>

Iztok Prezelj is a senior research fellow and assistant professor at the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Ljubljana. He also teaches a course on national and international security at the Command and Staff School of the Slovenian Armed Forces. His research interests include national and international security, crisis management, terrorism & counter-terrorism, threat & risk assessments, and interagency cooperation in South-Eastern Europe. His recent publications include The Fight Against Terrorism and Crisis Management in the Western Balkans (IOS Press, Netherlands, 2008, forthcoming); Teroristično ogrožanje nacionalne in mednarodne varnosti, (visiting editor, Varstvoslovje, no. 1, vol. 8, 2006); Nacionalni sistemi kriznega menedžmenta [National Crisis Management Systems] (Založba FDV, Ljubljana, 2005); and Smuggling as a Threat to National and International Security: Slovenia and the Balkan Route (Athena Paper, G. Marshall Center, Germany, 2005).

Web page: <http://www.etc-graz.at/cms/index.php?id=383>

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

Stéphane Roussel is associate professor of political science at the Université du Québec à Montréal (UQAM) and Canada Research Chair in Canadian Foreign and Defence Policy. Dr. Roussel is a member and acting director of the Centre d'études des politiques étrangères et de sécurité (CEPES, UQAM), and a fellow at the Canadian Defence and Foreign Affairs Institute (CDFAI, Calgary). His research interests relate to Canadian foreign and defence policy, with particular emphasis on the relations with the United States and European countries. He has also developed an expertise in related fields, such as international relations theory and military history. Dr Roussel has published several articles and books related to these themes, most recently Politique internationale et défense au Canada et au Québec (with Kim Richard Nossal and Stéphane Paquin, Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 2007) and Culture stratégique et politique de défense: l'expérience canadienne (Athéna, 2007).

Web page: http://www.chairs.gc.ca/web/chairholders/viewprofile_e.asp?id=438&

Brian C. Schmidt is associate professor of political science at Carleton University. His research and teaching interests are in international relations theory, American foreign policy, and disciplinary history. His book The Political Discourse of Anarchy (1998), which received the Choice 1998 Outstanding Academic Book Award, examines the history of the field of international relations from the mid-1800s to the outbreak of World War II. He continues to pursue research on the history of the field and is currently working on a book on realism. At Carleton University, Dr. Schmidt teaches courses on international relations theory, the causes of war, American foreign policy, and the United Nations. Web page: <http://www.carleton.ca/polisci/Faculty/list/schmidt.html>

Steven Staples is the founder, current president and director of the Rideau Institute. In the past 15 years, Steven has acted as the director of security programs for the Polaris Institute, the issue campaigns coordinator for the Council of Canadians and the coordinator for End the Arms Race. He is well known for his work on international defence, disarmament and trade issues. In 2006, he published his first book Missile Defence: Round One (Lorimer), which chronicled the citizen-based campaign that succeeded in persuading the Paul Martin government to announce that it would not join the U.S. ballistic missile defence program in February 2005. Steven Staples is a member of the Canadian Pugwash Group and the Group of 78, and also acts as the general secretary of the international network of anti-nuclear groups, Abolition 2000.

Web page: <http://www.rideauinstitute.ca/site/c.dolELOOuGnF/b.3348213/>

Mira Sucharov is associate professor of political science at Carleton University, specializing in international relations, international security, political psychology, and Israeli-Palestinian relations. Her book The International Self: Psychoanalysis and the Search for Israeli-Palestinian Peace (Albany: SUNY Press, 2005) employs a socio-psychoanalytic model to examine the conditions under which a state will shift its policy stance from conflict to compromise -- in this case, Israel's decision to seek peace with the PLO in the form of the Oslo process. She is currently working on a project about loyalty in international relations.

Web page: <http://www.carleton.ca/polisci/Faculty/list/sucharov.html>

Conference: “Transatlantic Relations and International Conflict Management”
February 7-8, 2008

James Walsh is associate professor of political science and associate chair in the Political Science Department at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He received his doctorate in international relations from American University. Walsh is currently researching the causes of domestic and transnational terrorism, the relationships between terrorist attacks and human rights abuses, and is completing a book on the politics of international intelligence sharing.

Web page: <http://www.uncc.edu/jwalsh>

Alison Weston is head of Middle East and Asia Section in the CPCC - Civilian Planning and Conduct Capability, the new structure established within the EU Council Secretariat to deal with civilian aspects of the European Security and Defence Policy (ESDP). The Middle East/Asia Section is responsible for EUPOL Afghanistan, EUPOL COPPS, EUBAM Rafah (both in the Palestinian Territories) and EUJUST LEX (for Iraq).

Benjamin Zyla is the Ronald D. Byers post-doctoral fellow at the Queen's Centre for International Relations in Kingston. Dr. Zyla was a holder of a two year 'Government of Canada Award' of the International Council of Canadian Studies. His research interests lie in international relations theory, Canadian foreign policy, the transatlantic relationship, and global governance. In April 2006, he was elected to the Executive Board of the Young Researchers Network (YRN) of the European Community Studies Association Canada (ECSA-C).