PUT YOUR TALENTS to work FOR CANADIANS

Are you interested in:

- Helping Canada prepare for future pandemics?
- Developing financial policy in an uncertain global economy?
- Managing the impacts of an aging population?
- Supporting innovation and new technology?
- Addressing a range of other public policy issues?

The opportunities are endless with the Government of Canada's Recruitment of Policy Leaders (RPL) program. It can open the door to a career in the field that you're passionate about.

Use your skills and expertise to make a difference.

Each year, the RPL program seeks talented professionals, academics, scientists and thinkers, offering them a unique opportunity to launch directly into stimulating and diverse careers in the federal public service. You could soon be joining this dynamic network.

The RPL program is looking for candidates with a strong record of academic excellence, an interest in public policy and experience that demonstrates leadership and commitment. Candidates from all fields and professional backgrounds must hold (or be about to finish) a Master's, Doctoral or a law degree complemented by an undergraduate degree in any discipline.

Become a policy leader.

For the 2013-2014 campaign, the RPL program is looking for candidates ready to take on mid-to senior-level positions as policy analysts. Successful RPL candidates will help shape public policy responses to pressing challenges facing Canada.

If your résumé matches the RPL criteria, the Government of Canada strongly encourages you to apply on-line at: http://jobs-emplois.gc.ca/rpl-rlp/index-eng.php.

Applications will be accepted on-line between September 30 and October 15, 2013.

We look forward to meeting you!
