CALENDAR DESCRIPTION

Definitions and goals of regulation; contemporary theories and debates about legal and non-legal approaches to regulation. Approaches studied may include market mechanisms, public agency regulation, self-regulation and governance in co-operation with associations in civil society.

COURSE OVERVIEW

This course is concerned with the relation between legal and non- or extra-legal modes of social, political and moral regulation. In this course we will take a broadly theoretical and historical approach to the issue of law and regulation drawing upon the body of scholarship largely inspired by the work of Michel Foucault known as 'governmentality.' In this course we will discuss concepts such as the state, sovereignty, governmentality, police, discipline, biopower, population, liberalism, neo-liberalism, and emergency powers.

EVALUATION

Assignments are due at the start of class the date they are due. Any assignments submitted after the start of class or to the drop box will be deemed late. Late assignments are penalized one grade point per day late (e.g., an assignment two days late which merits a grade of A- will be given a grade of B). Extensions will not be granted under any circumstance. Please note that the book review, final paper proposal, and the final paper must be completed in order to pass this course; i.e., failure to submit all three assignments will result in a mark of FND. Plagiarism will not be tolerated and will result in the matter being referred to the Dean of the Faculty of Public Affairs and will most likely result in a failure on the assignment, if not also the course. There are no exceptions to any of these policies. While all grades are subject to approval by the Chair of the Department of Law and the Dean of the Faculty of Public Affairs, provisional marks will be posted to WebCT as they become available.

Short Papers (2x25%)Due October 18, 2010 and November 15, 2010

Students are required to complete two short papers (about 1500-2000 words). The best way to learn theoretical concepts is to read and write about them. These papers are intended to be short exercises in which the student enquires into the logic of a particular concept, discussing its strengths and weaknesses, and its potential applications. It is expected that papers will extend beyond mere summaries of the readings and will attempt to critically engage with the concepts. Papers must be written in standard English, with proper citations and a bibliography. Any recognized style (APA, MLA, Chicago, etc) is acceptable. The first assignment deals primarily with the matter discussed in the lecture on the pastoral, police and reason of state. The second assignment deals primarily with the matter discussed in the lecture on liberalism. Both short papers must be submitted in order to pass this course.

Take Home Exam (50%)Due December 22, 2010

In effect, the take-home exam is another two short papers (1500-2000 words per answer; thus, about 3000 words total). Questions will be posted to WebCT and discussed in class on the final day of the semester. The take-home exam will address content discussed during the second half of the course. Take home exams must be written in standard English, with proper citations and a bibliography. Any recognized style (APA, MLA, Chicago, etc) is acceptable. A take-home exam with two completed answers must be submitted in order to pass this course. Late assignments will not be accepted and cannot be marked per university regulations. Exams will not be returned, but will be made available for viewing at the Department of Law in January.
