For Religious and Pregnancy accommodations, please contact Equity Services, x. 5622 or their website: www.carleton.ca/equity

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Over the past three decades, the mediation process has been applied to resolve many types of conflicts and disputes. It has been developed and adapted in a variety of situations and contexts where it has proven to have a number of advantages over the more formal, traditional procedures in those areas. This course examines mediation from a multidisciplinary perspective, exploring how theories of communication, social psychology, sociology, political science, business management and legal studies can contribute to our understanding of mediation and its practice. Topics to be covered include mediation and alternative methods of dispute resolution, conflict and mediation theory and the application of mediation to a variety of contexts from interpersonal conflicts to organizational, criminal, community and public policy disputes. Current trends such as models of practice, the role of the mediator, narrative mediation, Insight mediation, restorative justice, intercultural mediation, gender issues and particular areas of practice will also be examined.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

To understand the principles and theories of mediation and its practice;
To evaluate and reflect critically upon those principles and theories and their impact on practice;
To gain an introductory understanding of the goals, strategies, skills and art of mediation practice.

REQUIRED TEXTS

1. Picard, Cheryl, Peter Bishop, Rena Ramkay, Neil Sargent. The Art and Science of Mediation. Toronto: Emond Montgomery, 2004

EVALUATION – All four components must be completed in order to get a passing grade.
– All assignments under items 1, 2, and 3 below will be submitted through WebCT or other electronic means

1. Class Preparedness and Participation (20%)
Students are required to complete readings before class and offer informed and analytical discussion based on assigned readings. Students will be evaluated on their preparedness and participation in class and in small group discussions and exercises. Students will also be evaluated on a group assignment to be done during and between classes. This component will constitute 20% of the final mark
2. Reflective Journal (20%)
Students will be required to keep a regular journal of their insights, reflections and experiences relating to the subject matter of this course. In particular, a student will be required to write six journal entries, applying course concepts and methods to actual conflict situations. A journal entry may include reflections on one's own and other's communication styles and preferences, perspectives and perceptions, personality types, cultural factors and generally any aspect of how different people relate and respond to conflict. The first two journal entries are to be submitted for feedback on or before October 9 and all six journal entries are to be submitted for marking on or before November 13. The journal is worth 20% of the final mark.
3. Research Term Paper (30%)
Students will be required to submit a research term paper that relates to some course themes and principles. Students may select any area of practice to research. Guidelines for this term paper will be handed out to students in class. Students will be required to submit a two page proposal (plus preliminary bibliography) of what they will undertake for their research paper. The term paper proposal is due on October 16 and the term paper is due on November 20. The term paper is worth 30% of the final mark.
4. Final Examination (30%)
Students will be required to write a final examination at a time to be scheduled during the fall term examination period of December 6-19, 2012. It may be necessary for this examination to be scheduled during the day. This final examination will be a three hour, closed book examination with essay questions. The final examination will be worth 30% of the student's final mark.
