COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines the intersection of criminal law and medicine. The first part of the course deals with the relationship between criminal law, psychiatry and neuroscience. We will look at how the criminal law defines mental illness and at the concepts of fitness to stand trial and criminal responsibility. We will also look at the mechanisms by which the state restrains the liberty of mentally ill individuals.

LAWS 4307B

The second part of the course deals with a variety of areas in which branches of medicine outside psychiatry intersect with the criminal law. We will look at underlying themes and principles, paying particular attention to the competing interests of the individuals involved and the wider community. This part of the course will involve student lead discussions of assigned topics.

REQUIRED TEXTS

There is no required text. Readings are assigned for each week. The readings are either cases or articles in academic journals. It is important that students complete all the assigned readings.
