Course description

This course is a follow-up to the third-year course on Theories of International Politics. It is a more thorough look at key theories used in the study of international politics. The course takes as its starting point the epistemological and ontological debates in the discipline of International Relations (IR), which seeks to explain all or some part of international politics. For each theory, we will be interested in the problem that is to be explained or solved, the explicit and implicit assumptions made by the theorist, the way knowledge about the world is produced, the actors who receive the theorist's attention, and the political and ethical implications of using the theory as a guide to action. While the course is theoretical in orientation, current and historical events are the object analyzed. Students are therefore encouraged to follow the news and to call on their broader knowledge of politics and history as part of their work in the course.

Course organization

The material is divided based on the evolution of the discipline. It follows the development of different paradigms and highlights the debates that take place between theorists working within these paradigms. Classes consist of a weekly three-hour seminar. Except for the first week, classes will begin with a brief introduction by the instructor followed by a discussion of salient themes from the week's readings. After a 15-minute break at the midway point, we will come back for student presentations, also followed by a discussion of the ideas raised therein.

Readings

There are four sources for the course's readings. They are:

- (1) Scott Burchill et al., Theories of International Relations 3rd ed. (Palgrave Macmillan, 2005).
- (2) Tim Dunne, Milja Kurki and Steve Smith, eds., International Relations Theories: Discipline and Diversity (Oxford University Press, 2007).
- (3) A coursepack available at Allegra Print & Imaging at 1069 Bank St.
- (4) Electronically available readings indicated in the reading list below.

The two books may be purchased at Haven Books (43 Seneca Street at Sunnyside). Please note: All readings are of equal importance, whatever their source.

Evaluation

Method	Weight	Due date
In-class quizzes	2 x 5%	Unannounced
Presentation, 12-15min	15%	Starting week 3
Critical review, 5pp.	20%	Day of presentation
Research essay, 15pp.	35%	30 March
Participation	20%	Weekly

Participation: Since this is a seminar, students will do most of the talking. Readings must therefore be done before the class for which they are assigned. Comments made during the seminar must reflect their content. The participation grade combines presence and actual contribution. Quality, collegiality, and frequency are criteria in evaluating students' contribution. All three must be present to obtain a superior grade (16/20 or more). Absences must be justified to avoid being penalized. At the instructor's discretion, half the participation grade may result from unannounced in-class quizzes.

Presentation: Students are required to give one oral presentation of a supplementary reading. Its purpose is to present the author's argument as faithfully as possible to an audience who has not read the text. The duration of the presentation is 12-15min. There will be a maximum of three presentations in any given week. Be sure to select a reading as early as possible from the supplementary readings list supplied by the instructor.

Critical review: Students are required to write a critical review of the supplementary reading they chose. The review must address the contribution of the piece to our understanding of international politics. Do not summarize the text: use the entire space to assess the author's argument. It is not an essay in the strict sense, but there must be a thread guiding the review. The critical review must number 5 double-spaced pages, with 1-inch margins. Indicate the text reviewed on the cover page.

Research essay: Students are required to write one substantial research essay on a topic of their choice. It takes the form of a literature review in which students must identify a common thread running through the IR literature and discuss it, or a gap in the IR literature that the paper will address. A clear thesis must guide the argument. It must draw on academic and theoretical sources beyond the course readings (and beyond the supplementary list) and it must be properly referenced. It must number 15 double-spaced pages (excluding the bibliography), with 1-inch margins.

Late assignments and other policies: Late assignments must be accompanied by a justificatory document. Otherwise, the penalty is 5% per calendar day. Papers submitted by fax or email will not be accepted. Do not send assignments by email as proof that you met the deadline or that the assignment is "only one day late". The date the hard copy is received is the date of submission recorded. Do not slide assignments under the instructor's office door under any circumstances. Assignments deposited in the Department's drop-box after 4pm will be stamped with the next day's date. Papers submitted seven days late will receive a grade of zero. Retain a copy of all your assignments.

Academic Accommodations

For students with Disabilities: Students with disabilities requiring academic accommodations in this course must register with the Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (500 University Centre) for a formal evaluation of disability-related needs. Registered PMC students are required to contact the centre (613-520-6608) every term to ensure that the instructor receives your letter of accommodation. After registering with the PMC, make an appointment to meet with the instructor in order to discuss your needs at least two weeks before the first assignment is due or the first in-class test/midterm requiring accommodations. If you require accommodation for your formally scheduled exam(s) in this course, please submit your request for accommodation to PMC by November 7, 2008 for December examinations, and March 6, 2009 for April examinations.

For Religious Observance: Students requesting accommodation for religious observances should apply in writing to their instructor for alternate dates and/or means of satisfying academic requirements. Such requests should be made during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist, but no later than two weeks before the compulsory academic event. Accommodation is to be worked out directly and on an individual basis between the student and the instructor(s) involved. Instructors will make accommodations in a way that avoids academic disadvantage to the student. Instructors and students may contact an Equity Services Advisor for assistance (www.carleton.ca/equity).

For Pregnancy: Pregnant students requiring academic accommodations are encouraged to contact an Equity Advisor in Equity Services to complete a letter of accommodation. Then, make an appointment to discuss your needs with the instructor at least two weeks prior to the first academic event in which it is anticipated the accommodation will be required.

Plagiarism: The University Senate defines plagiarism as "presenting, whether intentional or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one's own." This can include:

- reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else's published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one's own without proper citation or reference to the original source;
- submitting a take-home examination, essay, laboratory report or other assignment written, in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, or paraphrased material, concepts, or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another's data or research findings;
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another's works and/or failing to use quotation marks;
- handing in "substantially the same piece of work for academic credit more than once without prior written permission of the course instructor in which the submission occurs.

Plagiarism is a serious offence which cannot be resolved directly with the course's instructor. The Associate Deans of the Faculty conduct a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They include a mark of zero for the plagiarized work or a final grade of "F" for the course. The Department's Style Guide is available at: <http://www.carleton.ca/polisci/undergrad/Essay%20Style%20Guide.html>

Oral Examination: At the discretion of the instructor, students may be required to pass a brief oral examination on research papers and essays.

Submission and Return of Term Work: Papers must be handed directly to the instructor and will not be date-stamped in the departmental office. Late assignments may be submitted to the drop box in the corridor outside B640 Loeb. Assignments will be retrieved every business day at 4 p.m., stamped with that day's date, and then distributed to the instructor. For essays not returned in class please attach a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you wish to have your assignment returned by mail. Please note that assignments sent via fax or email will not be accepted. Final exams are intended solely for the purpose of evaluation and will not be returned.

Approval of final grades: Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by an instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Course Requirements: Students must fulfill all course requirements in order to achieve a passing grade. Failure to hand in any assignment will result in a grade of F. Failure to write the final exam will result in a grade of ABS. FND (Failure No Deferred) is assigned when a student's performance is so poor during the term that they cannot pass the course even with 100% on the final examination. In such cases, instructors may use this notation on the Final Grade Report to indicate that a student has already failed the course due to inadequate term work and should not be permitted access to a deferral of the examination. Deferred final exams are available ONLY if the student is in good standing in the course.

Connect Email Accounts: The Department of Political Science only communicates with students via Connect accounts. Important course and University information is also distributed via the Connect email system. It is the student's responsibility to monitor their Connect account.

Carleton Political Science Society: The Carleton Political Science Society (CPSS) has made its mission to provide a social environment for politically inclined students and faculty. Holding social events, debates, and panel discussions, CPSS aims to involve all political science students in the after-hours academic life at Carleton University. Our mandate is to arrange social and academic activities in order to instill a sense of belonging within the Department and the larger University community. Members can benefit through numerous opportunities which will complement both academic and social life at Carleton University. To find out more, please email carletonpss@gmail.com, visit our website at poliscisociety.com, or come to our office in Loeb D688.

Official Course Outline: The course outline posted to the Political Science website is the official course outline.
