

Join mamawi:together

Because we care about truth and reconciliation for residential school survivors, Aboriginal Peoples of Canada and building a community based on greater understanding and respect.

Students at Pleasant Park Public School are creating four art murals in collaboration with Algonquin Elder, artist and poet Albert Dumont that will be mounted on the exterior of the school. The murals will showcase Canada's four seasons, and honour the work of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and Survivors of Residential Schools.

If you, your organization or school is doing something in support of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission or any other First Nations, Métis and Inuit related initiatives, we'd like to know!

LEARN MORE

- Visit the mamawitogether Pleasant Park website to see project updates and photos.
- Like our Facebook page. Post info on your project. Share photos or videos. Learn what others are doing.
- Attend our May 21st lecture by Truth and Reconciliation Commissioner Marie Wilson titled "The role we can all play in reconciliation moving forward." RSVP today!
- Witness the art mural unveiling as a gesture of reconciliation on June 12 at the Pleasant Park Public School annual BBQ.
- Help us complete the art mural production through a donation
- Join the Twitter chatter at #mamawitogether.
- Contact Margaret Embleton for more information.

Mamawi:together is an initiative to demonstrate how much we care— through our art mural project and other projects taking place across Canada.

Màmawi means together in Algonquin. Ottawa is located on traditional Algonquin territory.

"Reconciliation is about forging and maintaining respectful relationships. There are no short cuts."

—Hon. Justice Murray Sinclair