

NOKOKO

7

2019

NOKOKO

7

Nokoko is an open-access journal promoting dialogue, discourse and debate on Pan-Africanism, Africa, and Africana. Nokoko brings forward the foundational work of Professor Daniel Osabu-Kle and his colleagues when they started the Journal of Pan-African Wisdom in 2005. 'Nokoko' is a Ga word that means something that is new, novel, surprising and interesting. The journal offers a venue for scholarship to challenge enduring simplified views of Africa and the African diaspora, by providing other perspectives and insights that may be surprising, interesting, and refreshing.

Combining spaces for academic and community reflection, Nokoko creates an opportunity for discussion of research that reflects on the complicated nature of pan-African issues. It provides a forum for the publication of work from a cross disciplinary perspective that reflects scholarly endeavour, policy discussions, practitioners' reflections, and social activists' thinking concerning the continent and beyond. Hosted by the Institute of African Studies at Carleton University (in Ottawa, Canada), Nokoko provides a space for emerging and established scholars to publish their work on Africa and the African diaspora.

The Editorial Board of Nokoko is

Sinmi Akin-Aina, African Leadership Centre for Peace, Conflict & Development Research

James Nii Ayite Aryee, Federal Civil Servant, Ottawa

Daniel Baheta, Senior Development Officer, Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

Emma Bider

Logan Cochrane, Banting Postdoctoral Fellow, Global & International Studies, Carleton University.

Pablo Idahosa, Professor, Development Studies, York University

Wangui Kimari, Postdoctoral researcher, African Centre for Cities, University of Cape Town

Firoze Manji, adjunct professor, African Studies, Carleton University; activist, publisher and scholar

Toby Leon Moorsom, Lecturer, Lancaster University, Ghana Campus, Adjunct Professor, Institute of African Studies, Carleton University.

Grace Adeniyi Ogunyankin, Women's and Gender Studies, Carleton

Nduka Otiono, Assistant Professor, Institute of African Studies, Carleton

Blair Rutherford, Professor of Anthropology and African Studies, Carleton

Daniel Tubb, Assistant Professor, University of New Brunswick

Bissy Waariyo, Graduate, Institute of African Studies.

Kaitlin Walker, Policy and Program Officer

Christopher Webb, Researcher, International Development Research Centre

Layout by Daniel Tubb.

Cover photograph of the 2019 Algerian protests by Hamza Hamouchene.

Table of Contents

Incorporeal Words: The Tragic Passing of Pius Adesanmi Blair Rutherford .....	iix
Editors' Notes: Elections and Electoral Politics in Africa Movements Forward, Backwards or Nowhere? Toby Leon Moorsom, Wangui Kimari, Christooher Webb .....	1
Entrenched Dictatorship: The Politics of Rigged Elections in Rwanda since 1994 Susan Thomson with Madeline Hopper .....	11
Electoral Democracy and the Attenuation of Subaltern Resistance in Ghana: Why Democracy is increasingly becoming a Poisoned Chalice in Africa Jasper Abembia Ayelazuno .....	47
Voting without Choosing? Ethnic Voting Behaviour and Voting Patterns in Nigeria's 2015 Presidential Election and Implications for Institutionalisation of Social Conflicts Kialeee Nyiayaana .....	79
Governing Extractive Industries: The Case of Angola's Petroleum Sector Anastasia Ufimtseva .....	113
An Exploration of Domains Towards Unlocking Zimbabwean Youths' Socio Economic and Political Empowerment Tatenda Goodman Nhapi & Takudzwa Leonard Mathende ..	147
The People's President? Raila Odinga and the "Tunaapisha" Movement Oyunga Pala .....	175

Firoze Manji: What happened to the “African Awakenings” of 2011?
Interview by Toby Leon Moorsom and Christopher Webb .... 185

Africanizing the State: Globalizing the Discipline
Andrew Heffernan ..... 203

Contributors

Blair Rutherford is professor of Anthropology in the Department of Sociology & Anthropology at Carleton University in Ottawa, Canada and editor of Nokoko. For over 25 years, his ethnographic research in various countries in sub-Saharan Africa has focused on the cultural politics of predominantly rural livelihoods, examining in particular the varied terms, conditions and contestations of labour relations along racialized, gendered, classed and citizenship axes within overlapping (and at times competing) scales of action. He is the author of Working on the Margins: Black Workers, White Farmers in Postcolonial Zimbabwe (Zed Books and Weaver Press, 2001), Farm Labor Struggles in Zimbabwe: The Ground of Politics (Indiana University Press, 2017), and co-editor of Sexual Violence in Conflict and Post-Conflict Societies: International Agendas and African Contexts (Routledge, 2014).

Toby Leon Moorsom is a lecturer in the Department of Politics, Philosophy and Religions at Lancaster University, Ghana and Adjunct Professor in the Institute of African Studies at Carleton University. His research focuses on the political economy of agriculture and politics of development in Africa. He is currently examining smallholder commercialisation policies in Ghana. In addition to his editorial work with Nokoko, he has published in Review of African Political Economy, Canadian Journal of African Studies, Socialist Studies, Pambazuka, The Bulletin, Rankandfile.ca and Al Jazeera English, among others. He has reviewed manuscripts for the Canadian Jour- nal of Development Studies, Canadian Journal of African Studies, Journal of Benin Studies, Palgrave Macmillan, Routledge and Between the Lines press, among others.

Wangui Kimari is a postdoctoral research fellow at the African Centre for Cities at the University of Cape Town. She is also the participatory action research coordinator for Mathare Social Justice Centre (MSJC), a community based organization in Nairobi.

Christopher Webb (PhD 2019, University of Toronto) is a Research Award Recipient at the International Development Research Centre in Ottawa.

Susan Thomson is Associate Professor of Peace and Conflict Studies at Colgate University. Her research is dedicated to understanding how systems of power structure the lives of individuals in so-called times of peace. She also studies the ethical challenges of doing field-based research in postconflict settings. Thomson authored Whispering Truth to Power: Everyday Resistance to Reconciliation in Postgenocide Rwanda (2013), co-edited "Emotional and Ethical Challenges for Field Research in Africa: The Story Behind the Findings," (2013), and is editor of the Research in Difficult Settings website. Her latest book is Rwanda: From Genocide to Precarious Peace, published in April 2018 by Yale University Press.

Andrew Heffernan is completing the PhD program in political science at the University of Ottawa. He holds a joint honours degree in political science and history, an honours degree in globalization and international development and a master's of arts from the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs with a specialization in environmental sustainability. Major research interests include African politics, climate change politics, International Relations, assemblages and sub-state level politics.

Madeline Hopper is a master's student at SOAS, University of London, in the Violence, Conflict and Development program. Her upcoming dissertation research will explore the experiences of Rwanda's children born of war through a transitional justice framework. She holds a Bachelor of Art's degree in Peace and Conflict Studies from Colgate University (awarded in 2018). As part of her undergraduate degree, Hopper wrote a thesis on the intricacies of silence and surveillance in post-genocide Rwanda.

Jasper Abembia Ayelazuno is a Ghanaian public servant and academic with more than 30 years combined experience of public service, teaching and research. He is presently a Senior Lecturer and Head of the Department of Communication, Innovation and Technology, University for Development Studies, Nyankpala Campus. Jasper was born and raised in a peasant family, and the first in this family to attend school in his remote village, Mirigu, in the Upper East Region of Ghana. He obtained his PhD in Political Science from York University in Canada, his MA in Development Studies from Sussex University in England, and his BA (Hons) from the University of Ghana, Legon. He is the author of the book, Neoliberal Globalization and Resistance from Below: Why the Subalterns Resist in Bolivia and not in Ghana (2019), Routledge. He is the Guest Editor of the Special Section of Volume 81 of Land Use Policy on Land Governance for Extractivism and Capitalist Farming in Africa (2019). He has published in the Review of African Political Economy, Resources Policy, Extractive Industries and Society, and Journal of Asian and African Studies. He has just completed a research project on Large-scale land acquisition in Ghana and the implications for Development, sponsored by the Volkswagen Foundation Senior Fellowship programme on the Social Sciences in Africa. Jasper is currently working on a monograph from this project.

Anastasia Ufimtseva is a doctoral candidate (ABD) at the Balsillie School of International Affairs, Wilfrid Laurier University. She holds an MA degree in Political Science from the University of Waterloo and a BA degree (honours) from the University of British Columbia. Anastasia's doctoral dissertation examines Chinese FDI in the hydro-carbon sector of Russia and Canada. (Anastasia Ufimtseva aUfimtseva@balsillieschool.ca)

Tatenda Goodman Nhapi holds a Bachelor of Science Social Work Honours Degree from the University of Zimbabwe. In 2015 he was awarded an Erasmus Mundus Masters in Advanced Development Social Work, a five European universities study consortium programme. Tatenda is an academic and practitioner. Currently he practices Social Work with a UK local authority. His research interests include social policy and administration, environmental social justice and sustainable development approaches. To his credit, he has published 10 journal articles and book chapters in these domains. (nhapaz@yahoo.com).

Takudzwa Mathende holds a Bachelor of Social Work Honours Degree from the University of Zimbabwe and an MA in Social Impact Assessment from the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. He is currently practicing as a Social Worker with a UK local authority. Previously, he worked in the child protection and social development sector both in Zimbabwe and City of Johannesburg, South Africa. Having worked for Africa's largest municipality, Takudzwa has developed tested research interests and experience in social impact assessment, social policy and environmental social work. (tmathende@yahoo.co.uk).

Oyunga Pala is a Kenyan writer and social commentator and presently curator of theelephant.info.

Kialee Nyiayaana is a senior lecturer in the Department of Political and Administrative Studies, University of Port Harcourt, Nigeria. He was a 2008/2009 Junior Fulbright Scholar at the Department of Conflict Analysis and Resolution, Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences, Nova Southeastern University, Florida. He was also an African Leadership Centre's Peace, Security and Development Fellow at King's College, London, between September 2013 and October 2014. His teaching, research interests and area of specialization include: Ethnic identity politics and conflicts in Nigeria; international relations; conflict resolution, armed conflicts and small arms proliferation.

Firoze Manji is Firoze Manji is a Kenyan activist with more than 40-year's experience in international development, health and human rights. He is the founder and former editor-in-chief of the pan-African social justice newsletter, Pambazuka News and of Pambazuka Press, and former executive director of Fahamu—Networks for Social Justice. He has previously worked as the Director of the Pan-African Baraza for ThoughtWorks and Head of CODESRIA's Documentation and Information Centre. He is a co-editor, with Sokari Ekine, of African Awakenings: The Emerging Revolutions. He was previously a Visiting Fellow at Kellogg College, University of Oxford, and is currently a Richard von Weizsäcker Fellow at the Robert Bosch Academy in Berlin. He is also an Associate Fellow of the Institute for Policy Studies. He holds a PhD and MSc from the University of London. He is the publisher of Daraja Press.