

ARTH 4900 [0.5 credit]

Art History/History and Theory of Architecture

Directed Readings and Research

In rare cases, students may design a course of reading that they complete independently, with the supervision of a faculty member. A final essay is the usual assignment.

In order to qualify for an independent study, students must have a CGPA of 10.00 or higher in Art/Architectural History or permission from the department, and fourth-year standing. To apply, students must meet with their proposed supervisor well in advance of the start of term and agree on a topic. The student must then write a proposal that includes: a description of the topic including key research questions, a list of proposed readings, a description of all assignments with deadlines, and the name of the proposed supervisor.

The proposal and accompanying proposal form must be sent to the Undergraduate Supervisor at least 1 week before the last day of registration for Fall and Winter terms so that it can be reviewed and approved. Students will not be permitted to register for this course until their proposal is approved.

Further guidelines:

Supervisors are either faculty members or adjunct research professors. They determine a suitable number of meetings with the student throughout the semester. The assigned workload must be comparable to other 4000-level classes. While the type of work required may vary from supervisor to supervisor, a formal research essay of 20 to 25 pages plus bibliography and footnotes is frequently requested.
