

BUTTERFLIES — AND MOTHS — ARE FREE AT CARLETON

JEAN LEVAC, THE OTTAWA CITIZEN

Carleton University botanist Ed Bruggink gets up close and personal with an atlas moth at the school's Nesbitt Biology Building greenhouses. Carleton is inviting the public to its annual 10-day butterfly extravaganza, starting tomorrow, at which hundreds of specimens from 25 or so species can be observed fluttering around their own tropical paradise. What's more, the whole affair's free, although you're welcome to make a donation. FULL STORY ON PAGE F10.
