Carleton aflutter with butterflies

A couple of butterflies perch on Ara Kirijian yesterday at Carleton University's annual show. The exhibit — open for the next week at the campus Nesbitt building — includes more than 1,000 butterflies of more than 30 different species. Elementary school students will tour the two greenhouses as they learn about butterflies from the university's Let's Talk Sciences group. The not-for-profit exhibit runs until Oct. 13 at no charge.
