

Henrietta Lacks Scholarship in Biology

Terms and Eligibility

Awarded annually on the recommendation of the Chair of the Department of Biology to an outstanding full-time student in the second year of a degree program in Biology or Biochemistry who is a Black woman. Application is required. Established in 2021 in memory of Henrietta Lacks whose cancer cells are the source of the HeLa cell line, the first immortalized human cell line and one of the most important cell lines in medical research

The history and scientific contribution of Black, Indigenous, and racialized people has been conspicuously absent from Science curriculum and members of these racialized groups are under-represented in biological fields. This scholarship was initiated and made possible through the remarkable fundraising efforts of the Carleton HeLa Team.

Bio On Henrietta Lacks:

Henrietta Lacks was a Black woman born on August 1, 1920, in Roanoke, Virginia. She moved to Baltimore with her husband, David Lacks. She was a mother of five children: Elsie, David, Deborah, Lawrence, Elsie, and Joseph (Zakariyya). In 1951, she went to John Hopkins hospital complaining about extensive vaginal bleeding [1]. Henrietta's cervical cancer was diagnosed through a biopsy, where the biopsy was also used to culture her cells which continue to multiply today [1]. Despite her cells living forever, Henrietta passed away on October 4, 1951 [2].

Bio on Family Foundation:

"We provide financial assistance to individuals and families — particularly within minority communities — who were involved in historic research cases without their knowledge, consent, or benefit. This includes the cases of Henrietta Lacks and HeLa cells, the Tuskegee Syphilis Studies, and The Human Radiation Experiments, among others. The Foundation offers those who have benefited from those contributions — including scientists, universities, corporations, and the general public — a way to show their appreciation to such research subjects and their families."
