Women and Work Research

CREWW's Mission - to facilitate and disseminate research on women and work to both academics and the broader community and to become the regional hub for research on women and work.

2019 Grants Available

The fifth round of CREWW's Women and Work Research Incubator Grants (WWRIG) program is being launched. CREWW is now inviting applications for small scale research grants (maximum $5,000 each) to be awarded in April 2019. Papers resulting from these grants will form the basis of a research roundtable on women and work that will be held in Ottawa in 2020.

The Centre for Research and Education on Women and Work (CREWW) is a network of researchers passionate about issues relevant to women and work. We are looking to expand our network to include other Ottawa-based researchers who share our research interests.

For this call, we are particularly interested in research relevant to the topic of “Women on the Move.” We define mobility broadly, embracing physical and virtual mobility across cultural and geographical borders for various reasons (e.g. migrants, refugees, expatriates, sojourners, business travelers, etc.). We are interested in building knowledge around issues arising at the intersection of gender and mobility, exploring how the interplay of multiple social categories (gender, race, ethnicity, class, etc.) converge in the experience of women on the move. The list below illustrates relevant issues:

- Career implications for women on the move
- Work-life balance in the context of mobility
- Entrepreneurship as a precursor or outcome of mobility
- Workplace diversity as a result of increased global mobility
- Gender influences on access to and potential for mobility

Other topics related to women and work will be considered based on fund availability.