Course Description

The study of economics is premised on the observation that human wants (all the goods, services, and conditions of life that people desire) exceed the resources available to satisfy them. Economics explores how limited resources are allocated among alternative uses to satisfy competing demands. Many current issues have their roots in the problem of using scarce resources efficiently. Topical issues in economics include how to foster a competitive and innovative business environment, the impacts of production activities on the natural environment, and inequities in society's distribution of income.

Learning Outcomes

This course provides an introduction to Microeconomics in which will develop principles useful for analyzing issues in the business environment with economic dimensions. We first develop a framework in which we can assess the well being of producers and consumers and then focus on issues such as efficient versus inefficient resource use, how the economy would perform if left to private incentives, and how public policy can help achieve desirable outcomes.

Preclusions and Prerequisites

ECON 1001 precludes additional credit for ECON 1000 and FYSM 1003. A grade of C- or higher is required to qualify for ECON/MATH 1402, ECON 2009, ECON 2020, and ECON 3001.

DEF(erred final grade) status at the end of this course precludes (continued) registration in any other course for which the former is a prerequisite.

E-proctoring will not be used for evaluations in this course, with the possible exception of students writing through the Distance Exam Service.

Deferred Finals

Students who do not write the final examination because of illness or other circumstances beyond their control may apply to write a deferred final examination by contacting the Registrar's Office no later than three working days after the original final examination was scheduled. In the event that a student writes a deferred examination, the deferred examination will carry the same weight as the final examination in determining the course grade. Any deferred examination will not be identical to the original final examination.
