Newly leaked e-mails to Hillary Clinton's campaign chairman, John Podesta, reveal that her liberal allies claimed, "She says things that are untrue, which candidly she often does." And that's just for starters.

THE NOMINEE

Donald Trump, who launched his campaign for president amid improbable odds, became the presumptive Republican nominee last night when his decisive victory in Indiana forced Ted Cruz to call it quits.

"I didn't expect this," Trump said. And now, "We're going after Hillary Clinton."

IS TRUMP GONE?

A close-up photograph of a cat's face. The cat has grey and white fur and large, bright yellow eyes. It is peeking over a dark wooden surface, with its head and front paws visible. The background is a light-colored, textured surface, possibly a wall or a piece of furniture. The cat's expression is one of concern or fear, with its ears slightly flattened and its mouth slightly open.

PIPELINES

OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Several high-profile pipeline projects in Canada and the U.S. are facing intense opposition. Despite the criticism these projects have attracted, the North American energy industry is busy building new pipelines and reversing existing ones to ease the massive backlog of fuel on the continent.

CURRENT NORTH AMERICAN PIPELINE
CRUDE OIL AND REFINED PRODUCTS
NATURAL GAS

The map displays a dense network of pipelines across North America. Red lines represent crude oil and refined products, while green lines represent natural gas. The network is particularly concentrated in the central and eastern United States and across Canada. Key locations marked include Norman Wells, Zama, Rainbow Lake, Fort McMurray, Edmonton, Fort Saskatchewan, Hardisty, Kitimat, Burnaby, Carway, Steelman, Cromer, Gretna, Trenton, Baker, Steele City, Flanagan, Wood River, Patoka, Cushing, Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, El Paso, Houston, Port Arthur, Corpus Christi, St. James, and Montreal. The map also shows the borders of the United States, Canada, and Mexico, as well as various states and provinces. A legend in the top right corner identifies the pipeline types: CRUDE OIL AND REFINED PRODUCTS (red line) and NATURAL GAS (green line). A scale bar and a north arrow are also present.
