NOTICE OF NEW REGULATION: GRADUATION REQUIREMENT FOR ENGINEERING

As a student in a Bachelor of Engineering program, it is important that you read this notice carefully.

As per the Registrar's recent communication, the University's introduction of Best Grade policy is effective immediately and is retroactive.

In addition to the Best Grade policy recently announced, the Faculty has introduced a new Engineering graduation regulation, also effective immediately and retroactive, which indicates:

To be eligible for graduation, the most recent grade in every course used to meet the requirements of the Bachelor of Engineering degree must be a passing grade.

This means that if you previously earned a passing grade (SAT, D- or higher) in a course then repeat the course and earn an F/UNS, your audit will be changed such that the F/UNS grade will replace the best course grade in your audit, and you will be required to repeat the course again in order to meet graduation requirements.

Over the next few weeks and then every subsequent term, the Faculty will be reviewing repeated course records for all BENG students to identify if such an audit adjustment is required. If an adjustment is made to your audit, you will receive an email from EngAcadSupport@carleton.ca informing you that a change has been made that provides further instruction.
