Course description: Culture and the Text: Eighteenth Century Texts: Materiality and Content

This course aims to provide students with the context and nature of the materiality of (paratext) of eighteenth century texts and give students the opportunity for original research in this field. Initially students will be given a theoretical background on how the 18th century book trade worked: how paper was made, how type was set, how books were printed and bound, and what was the role of bookseller, of publishing congers, etc. After the first seminar students will examine volumes from the Special Collections and choose the text they would like to work on, providing them with the exciting opportunity to handle and work with these rare books. This is done by examining the materiality of these books from the eighteenth century and how that materiality affects the nature of how one would read the content of the book. (A simple modern example would be that some titles from the Harry Potter series are different, as are the covers, in North America from those in the UK.) There are 3 blogs on the Teaching and Learning Services which give examples from last year's course.

Methodology

Your contribution to rare book research at Carleton will consist of an essay and seminar (complete with a works cited list) discussing the material form of Carleton's copy of the text you choose. In your essay and seminar you will consider the relationship between material form and content, and propose what this text, as object, contributes to an understanding of that particular genre in the eighteenth century; you should also select at least two images of the object (pages of text, illustrations, covers, etc.) for scanning as illustrations for your essay.

As the thesis of your essay (and of your seminar presentation) should be a statement about how this particular text materially contributes to an understanding of the history of the genre in the eighteenth century and how the particular text might be read, your essay should consider the following kinds of questions about content and form:

How does the title page present and categorize the book? Is it identified as a novel, or play or poem? If not, how is it described, and why might it be described that way? Does the title page seem to be aimed at a particular audience?

Does the book have a dedication, or a preface, or an introduction? How does this prefatory material frame the book? What might this framing suggest about the author's or the publisher's intentions for the marketing of the book?

Does the book have a table of contents? If so, how is it organized? How are the chapters/sections/acts identified, and why? Does this suggest anything about how authors or booksellers expected readers to read the text and use the book?

Does the book include any advertising information about the titles and/or prices of other books that the publisher sells? If so, what does this suggest about the publisher and their positioning in the market?

What is the size of the book, and how many volumes is it? What does the size of the book suggest about the publisher's costs or about the potential audience?

What kind of cover / binding does the book have? Remember that many eighteenth-century books were bound by the purchaser, not the publisher or bookseller. Bearing that in mind, what does the binding suggest about the owner's attitude toward and treatment of the book?

What kind of paper was used for the book? What size and style of print was used? Do these material details indicate quality, time, and expense? What do they suggest about the publisher's expenses and the intended market for the book?

Are there any illustrations? If so, how many? Where in the book are they placed? Are they signed? What is the purpose or function of the illustrations? What do they suggest about the publisher's expenses and the intended market for the book?

What is the condition of the book? Are there any marks of provenance (ownership) such as an owner's signature, bookplate, or book label? Is the book damaged or worn? If so, does the damage suggest use or mistreatment? Is there any marginalia? If so, what kind? Can you tell who may have owned or read the book and how they might have used it?

How many editions of the book were there in the eighteenth century? Does it appear to have been popular? How does the Carleton text compare to the first edition?

Does the text have an author listed? If not, why not and what does this imply? Does knowledge of the author help determine a reader's response?

Is this text considered an important one by scholars, particularly with reference to histories of that particular genre? Is there much or little criticism on this text? Does its canonical or non-canonical status appear to correlate with the material form of this particular copy?

Some possible texts:

There are many novels, poems, and plays in the eighteenth century section of the Special Collections at Carleton; each member of the course must select a text to deal with. The examination of the text will form the basis for your seminar and for your essay. The selections below are merely possibilities. There are many other selections in the Rare Books Collection.

Examples of available novels:

Fanny Burney, Camilla.

Fanny Burney, Cecilia, or Memoirs of an heiress.

Cervantes, Don Quixote [this text is in English. Only texts in English may be used for this course.]

As well there are many collections of eighteenth century poets, Cowper, Denham, Gray, Prior, Carey, Gay, Thomson, Savage, Young, etc.

William Congreve. Love for love, a comedy.

In addition, there are other forms of texts which may be utilized for the requirements of this course, e.g. miscellanies, travel writings, sermons, essays, letters, collections. These may pose slightly different bibliographic problems. However, they still may be used in the course.

Seminar schedule:

The initial seminars will consist of examining the texts with the above questions in mind and discussing the bibliographic problems, difficulties, and questions which the selected texts pose. We work individually, but also frequently as a group, to solve these 200 year old problems and mysteries. Later seminars will provide the opportunity for students to present their research to the rest of the class.

Evaluation

There will be 3 forms of evaluation. As the class will be working together and discussing the various bibliographic problems which arise in each student's research, a significant percentage of the final grade will be based on attendance and participation. The rest of the grade will be based on a seminar presentation and a final essay.

COURSE PROCEDURES, GRADES, AND GRADING

Basic Preparation: As a matter of course you are expected to: (1) attend all classes (2) complete any scheduled readings beforehand, (3) arrive prepared to discuss what you have read/ discovered about your selected text.

Handing In Assignments: The final essay is due on Friday, December 2nd, 2016, and should be submitted in class. However, it may be handed in without penalty until 8:00 a.m. the morning after the due date, via the English Department's drop box, located on the 18th floor of Dunton Tower. Please do not slip the assignment under my office door. Emailed or faxed assignments are not acceptable and will not be marked. Keep a back-up copy of every assignment you hand in as an insurance policy in the unlikely event that your essay is misplaced.

Late Penalty: The deadlines (both for the seminar presentation and the essay) must be met. Late essays are not normally accepted (for many reasons, not the least of which is that it is inherently unfair to those who do work hard to meet deadlines). If you have a valid reason for missing a deadline, and if I know in advance, your essay may be accepted.

Except in rare cases for which corroborating documentation can be provided (such as a medical emergency or the death of an immediate family member), assignments which are accepted and handed in after the due date will be penalized by 1/3 of a letter grade per day. For example, a B+ essay due on Monday but handed in on Tuesday afternoon would drop to a B. If it wasn't handed in until Wednesday it would receive a B-, etc. Saturday and Sunday count as 1 day each, so if you find yourself in the position of finishing up your late essay on Saturday afternoon and don't want to lose 1/3 of a grade for Sunday too, email me the completed assignment immediately and submit an identical hard copy to the drop box on Monday.

Extensions: Requests for extension may be granted in some instances, but only for compelling reasons. Any such request must be made in writing or in person to the professor no later than 48 hours prior to the due date of the assignment. Requests for “retroactive” extensions (i.e. requests made on or after the due date of the essay) will not be considered.

Grading Criteria: Grades for term work will be based on insightfulness, originality, focus, organization of ideas, clarity of expression, scholarly rigor, correct use of MLA style, spelling, and grammar.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism means passing off someone else's words or ideas as your own or submitting the same work in two different academic contexts (self-plagiarism). The consequences of plagiarism are severe and are issued by the Dean and the University Senate. In order to avoid plagiarism, you must correctly attribute the sources of the ideas you pick up from books, the internet, and other people. The use of the same (substantially unchanged) paper for different assignments in other courses is considered by Carleton University to constitute plagiarism. See the statement on Instructional Offences in the Undergraduate Calendar.

In addition I should like to quote a letter from C.S. Lewis to Dr. Alastair Fowler (dated 10 December 1959). Lewis writes: "I only once detected a pupil offering me some one else (Elton) as his own work. I told him I was not a detective nor even a schoolmaster, nor a nurse, and that I absolutely refused to take any precaution against such a puerile trick; that I'd as soon think it my business to see that he washed behind his ears or wiped his bottom...He went down [left the university] of his own accord the next week and I never saw him again. I think you ought to make a general announcement of that sort. You must not waste your time constantly reading me and Dowden and Churton Collins as a sort of police measure. It is bad for them to think this is 'up to you'. Flay them alive if you happen to detect them; but don't let them feel that you are a safeguard against the effects of their own idleness. What staggers me is how any man can prefer the galley-slave labour of transcription to the freeman's work of attempting an essay on his own...."

Request For Academic Accommodation:

You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term. For an accommodation request the processes are as follows:

Pregnancy obligation: write to me with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details see the Student Guide.

Religious obligation: write to me with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details see the Student Guide.

Academic Accommodations for Students with Disabilities: The Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) provides services to students with Learning Disabilities (LD), psychiatric/mental health disabilities, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD), chronic medical conditions, and impairments in mobility, hearing, and vision. If you have a disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact PMC at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation. If you are already registered with the PMC, contact your PMC coordinator to send me your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term, and no later than two weeks before the first in-class scheduled test or exam requiring accommodation (if applicable). Requests made within two weeks will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with me to ensure accommodation arrangements are made. Please consult the PMC website (www.carleton.ca/pmc) for the deadline to request accommodations for the formally-scheduled exam (if applicable).
