Course Description:
Translation and multilingualism loom large in contemporary discussions of global literatures and of transnationalism. These issues, however, also lie at the very heart of medieval English literature. What language do writers use at what point in their texts? Do they use a different language to speak to women or to men? How does translating a text change it, and in what ways? How might a writer change a text to reflect the perspectives of his or her culture? These are all questions that confronted writers working in the trilingual world of late medieval England as they made choices to write, or not to write, in English, French and Latin. This course offers students the opportunity to consider how various writers navigated these linguistic choices and the occasionally fierce, sometimes life-threatening, repercussions of the choices made. The course will explore the deployment of multiple languages within texts and within manuscripts as well as the ways in which texts migrate from one language to another through translation and re-translation. It will also consider the ways in which authors make use of different languages to advance distinctive authorial visions, and to retell the same narrative in intriguing and potentially inflammatory ways.

The course will begin by considering some of the theoretical pronouncements on multilingualism and translation by modern and medieval writers. It will then proceed to consider each week a set of late medieval texts that navigate multilingualism in interesting ways. We will study some Arthurian narratives and the forms they take in French, Welsh, and Middle English versions. We will also examine some macaronic poems (lyric poems written in multiple languages) and the ways they use different languages simultaneously to exclude or include certain audiences or evoke certain cultural associations. We will then turn to the writings of some of the renowned, canonical writers of late medieval England (Geoffrey Chaucer, John Gower, and William Langland) to study their engagement of the multilingual culture they inhabited. The course will then conclude by studying the ways in which women and heretics writing in English challenged the pervasive Latinity associated with masculine clerical culture during the Middle Ages as they translated or retold the Bible, and consequently found themselves involved in vehement and deadly cultural debates. In all cases, we will strive to answer the questions: What are the distinctive registers and resonances of different languages, and how do different medieval writers deploy them (and to what effect)?

N.B. All texts not in English will be read in a modern English translation, a decision which will, of course, also be a subject of reflection and discussion.

Course Objectives:
In this course students will:
• Read a variety of texts and genres from late medieval England
• Develop awareness of the multilingual registers within which many Middle English writers worked
• Reflect upon ideas of translation, originality, authorship, authority, “source” and “derivative” texts, and the problems of such terms and categorizations
• Develop awareness of the cultural politics associated with languages and translations in multilingual contexts both generally and in late medieval England
• Reflect upon the power of language selection and use, and the access to power that different languages either enable or thwart
• Read a range of secondary scholarship on the texts studied
• Develop an appreciation and understanding of the Middle English language as well as a facility with reading and quoting it
• Familiarize themselves with the characteristics of texts produced in a manuscript culture, and with the different ways in which such texts are presented today

Required Texts:

Books available at Haven Books, 43 Seneca Street, tel: 613-730-9888 /e-mail: info@havenbooks.ca; www.havenbooks.ca

Evaluation:

Manuscript Assignment (Due: Feb. 10) 10%
An assignment to transcribe and edit 10-15 lines of Middle English from a manuscript reproduction or reproductions. You will be expected to provide the edited lines, a description of the hand, and a brief rationale for your edition. A full assignment sheet with detailed instructions will be distributed separately.

Short Article Summary (Due: your selected day) 5%
A brief (one-page single-spaced maximum) written summary of one scholarly article listed as a Recommended Secondary Reading for this course. The summary is to be posted on CULearn the Monday before the class meeting under which it was listed.

Seminar Presentation (Due: your selected day) 35%
A 60-minute seminar presentation on issues related to the text(s) assigned for the day of your presentation. You should present information for 30 of those minutes and lead class discussion for the other 30 minutes. Secondary research is required, as are a one-page outline of the presentation and a list of the sources used.

Term Paper
5-minute Draft Paper Presentation (Due: April 6) 5%
15-20 page paper (Due: April 12) 35%
Secondary Research is required, as is use of MLA or Chicago Style for bibliographic references.

Attendance and Participation 10%
See distributed list of expectations

Please Note: If one of your assignments is lost, misplaced, or not received by the instructor, you are responsible for having a backup copy that can be submitted immediately upon request.

PLAGIARISM
The University Senate defines plagiarism as “presenting, whether intentionally or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one’s own.” This can include:

- reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else’s published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one’s own without proper citation or reference to the original source;
- submitting a take-home examination, essay, laboratory report or other assignment written, in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, or paraphrased material, concepts or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another’s data or research findings;
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another’s works and/or failing to use quotation marks;
- handing in substantially the same piece of work for academic credit more than once without prior written permission of the course instructor in which the submission occurs.
Plagiarism is a form of intellectual theft. It is a serious offence that cannot be resolved directly by the course’s instructor. The Associate Dean of the Faculty conducts a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They can include failure of the assignment, failure of the entire course, suspension from a program, suspension from the university, or even expulsion from the university. For more information please go to: http://www2.carleton.ca/studentaffairs/academic-integrity

Please note: Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by the instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Academic Accommodation
You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term. For an accommodation request the processes are as follows:

Pregnancy obligation: write to me with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details see the Student Guide http://carleton.ca/equity/accommodation/academic/students/

Religious obligation: write to me with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details see the Student Guide above.

Academic Accommodations for Students with Disabilities: The Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) provides services to students with Learning Disabilities (LD), psychiatric/mental health disabilities, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD), chronic medical conditions, and impairments in mobility, hearing, and vision. If you have a disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact PMC at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation. If you are already registered with the PMC, contact your PMC coordinator to send me your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term, and no later than two weeks before the first in-class scheduled assignment requiring accommodation. After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with me to ensure accommodation arrangements are made. Please consult the PMC website for the deadline to request accommodations for the formally-scheduled exams.

Please note: Student or professor materials created for this course (including hand-outs, lecture notes, assignments, essay drafts, seminar materials, etc.) remain the intellectual property of the author(s). They are intended for personal use and may not be reproduced or redistributed without prior written consent of the author(s).
