Note: this course is not a prerequisite for taking the Creative Writing workshops offered in the Department of English. In other words, taking this course does not guarantee admission into the department's Creative Writing workshops. These workshops (listed on the English Department's website) are all based on the submission of a quality portfolio (which this course will give you the opportunity to prepare) and the permission of the instructor.

As such, if you already have a portfolio of creative work, you might consider submitting it to one or more of the workshops we offer without taking this course.

But:

- If you feel you need time and guidance preparing a portfolio, this course is the ideal place to do so.

- If you never plan on taking a Creative Writing workshop but still have an interest in writing (as a practice or perhaps as a business, or just because you love reading and wonder what goes on behind the scenes) this course is also for you.
- If you are already in a Creative Writing workshop but are interested in learning more about the ins and outs of creative writing, this course is also for you.

Course Description:

This course is designed for students of any academic discipline or level who have an interest in creative writing—as an artistic practice, an industry, or an academic discipline. Students who have never written creatively are welcome in this course: they just need a desire to try it out. Students who have written creatively are also welcome.

The weekly schedule is divided into:

- A lecture by the instructor on weekly topics
- A workshop (led by a tutorial assistant or the instructor, wherein students share, respond to, and revise assigned prompts)

Learning outcomes:

1. Students will emerge from this course with a portfolio of creative work in multiple genres (poetry, short story, creative non-fiction, screenwriting, perhaps others). With this portfolio students can opt to apply for acceptance into the Creative Writing workshops at the 2000 and 3000 level offered in the Department of English.
2. Students will also gain a critical understanding of how creative writing functions as an industry, an academic discipline, a profession, and a practice, within Canada and North America.

3. Students will learn to read literary texts as writers and to speak about these same texts as writers (rather than as readers or scholars)
4. Students will learn how to critique a piece of writing, employing key terms such as “voice” and “character” for fiction, “image” and “rhythm” for poetry
5. Students will learn how to edit their own creative work and that of others
6. Students will have the opportunity to practice reading their own creative work in front of others

Required texts:

Each week we will read creative writing and/or an essay on the weekly topic(s). These readings will be on ARES (a digital repository of class readings made available through MacOdrum library). Using CU Learn, students will download, print out, and read the assigned readings, and come to class prepared to discuss them.

Evaluation and Assignments:

1. In-class quizzes on assigned readings, lecture material, and guest speakers:

3 x 5 % = 15%

Quizzes cover all lectures, assigned readings, and guest speakers. The quizzes are cumulative and are meant to evaluate comprehension of lectures and readings. They will not include writing anything creative (i.e. I will not ask you to write a poem etc.)

2. “Literary Event” review assignment: 15%

Each of you will attend a literary reading this fall here in Ottawa and write a review of it (two double-spaced pages, approximately 500-750 words).

VerseFest is an international poetry festival that runs in March, offering many tempting readings for you to attend and review; the Munro Beattie Lecture is in January, and there are literary readings hosted by the Department of English. I will also post some alternate readings (of fiction and poetry) throughout the term for you to attend.

You may begin your review by introducing the time, date, location, name of the reader(s). You can then comment on such things as your general impressions about the content of the reading, the reading style, the venue, and/ or the experience of listening to authors speak about their writing. Most importantly, please describe and comment upon what you learned from the event, particularly what you might apply to your own creative writing practice or reading the creative work of others. Question-and-answer periods after a literary reading are usually quite enriching as they often address writing practices and the professional side of writing. As with all assignments in this course, this review will be typed in Times New Roman 12-point font, and double spaced.

Your review is due TWO WEEKS after the event. Please drop off a hard copy in the Essay Drop Box located outside the English Department office, 1811 Dunton Tower.

3. Four Writing Prompts (revised and handed in with a “reflection” statement):

4 x 10 = 40 % total

Students will write eight prompts over the semester. From these eight prompts, students will choose their best four to revise and hand in to the instructor for grading (two from Weeks 2-6; two from Weeks 7-11). The editorial comments the prompts receive from your workshop group are the starting point for your revisions. Once you have thought about the feedback, revise your piece TWICE with the aim to clarify, solidify, and polish your writing. You will then write a statement reflecting on the editorial and revision experience (250 words in length for each prompt). This reflection statement will be written in formal, academic English, in full sentences. Please write a reflection statement for each revised prompt.

You could comment on some of the following in your reflection statement:

1. Why or why you have not integrated comments received in the workshop (especially if there was an overwhelming class consensus on a certain point).
2. Was the workshop helpful to you? Why or why not?
3. What have you learned from the workshop going forward? What writing skills or techniques do you feel you know need to address in your writing?
4. Anything else you think is relevant.

The final HARD COPY package you hand in includes: two original prompts (with evidence of editing and suggestions from a peer-editor and from you), a revised draft of each prompt showing evidence of your revisions (you can use highlighting, track changes, or hand-written annotation to show your revisions), and a final polished draft of each prompt. [Thus: three drafts in total for each prompt: original prompt with signs of editing + second draft with signs of editing + final draft, and a reflection statement for each of the final prompts (two reflection statements in total)].

INCLUDE YOUR NAME, TA NAME, AND STUDENT NUMBER

4. Editorial feedback: 20%

Students will print out and read each others' prompts (posted on CU Learn) BEFORE their designated workshops and offer 2-3 sentences of editorial feedback, along with in-line notations and/or corrections. In Week #1 I will provide the specific details of when prompts need to be posted on line. Please note that the forums will eventually shut, so late posted will not be accepted.

After editing and commenting each others' prompts, students will then bring hardcopies to discuss in person during "peer editing" sessions. Hardcopies will be shown to the workshop leader for grading and then returned to the writer (in class). TAs will monitor students' written and verbal editorial comments, ensuring it is constructive and makes use of terms and concepts discussed in lectures and readings.

This is the workshop portion of the course, dependent on reciprocally offering and receiving feedback on your creative writing with the aim of improving both your writing and your editorial skills.

5. Participation: 10%

Your TA will monitor your spoken contributions made during workshops (during peer editing sessions and group discussions). Posting your prompts on time and coming to the workshop prepared to discuss the prompts of your peers is included in your participation mark. Late arrivals, early departures, and not posting prompts will result in a reduced participation mark.

NB: Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by the instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

6. ATTENDANCE will be taken at the beginning of each class and workshops. A student who misses more than three classes OR three workshops without a medical note or note of accommodation will automatically lose 10% of their final grade. Thus: more than three workshops = -10% and more than three lectures = -10%.

Notes:

- The revised prompts you turn in MUST have been presented to your workshop group and your TA. If a student hands in a prompt that has not been workshopped by peers and the TA during the workshop, the grade allocated will be zero.
- Prompts must be circulated to the workshop group in advance (posted on CU Learn by the deadline). Unless there is a medical reason (or the equivalent) for not making your prompt available to your group on time, your prompt will not be read and you will lose participation marks. Late prompts will not be accommodated.

Plagiarism:

The University Senate defines plagiarism as “presenting, whether intentionally or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one’s own.” This can include:

- reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else’s published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one’s own without proper citation or reference to the original source;
- submitting a take-home examination, essay, laboratory report or other assignment written, in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, or paraphrased material, concepts, or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another’s data or research findings;
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another’s works and/or failing to use quotation marks;
- handing in "substantially the same piece of work for academic credit more than once without prior written permission of the course instructor in which the submission occurs."

Plagiarism is a serious offence that cannot be resolved directly by the course’s instructor. The Associate Dean of the Faculty conducts a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They can include a final grade of "F" for the course.
