

???

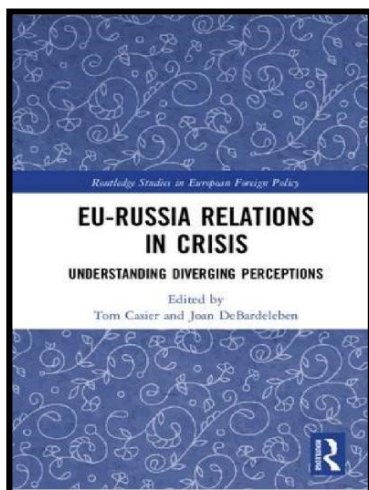

The European Union and Russia: Where Now?

Thursday, January 18, 2018, 12:30–5:00PM
Senate Room, 608 Robertson Hall, Carleton University

- SPEAKERS:
- Tom Casier University of Kent, Brussels School of International Studies, Brussels, Belgium
 - Joan DeBardeleben Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada
 - Tatiana Romanova St. Petersburg State University, St. Petersburg, Russia
 - Licinia Simão University of Coimbra, Coimbra, Portugal (via video link)
 - Crina Viju Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada
- COMMENTATOR: Piotr Dutkiewicz Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada

European, Russian, and Canadian experts will discuss the current state and future directions for relations between the European Union and Russia in the face of the ongoing Ukraine crisis and sanctions regimes. The workshop will include authors of a newly published book, EU-Russia Relations in Crisis: Understanding Diverging Perceptions (Routledge, 2018), edited by Tom Casier and Joan DeBardeleben.

A light lunch will be provided for participants at 12:00PM with welcoming comments starting at 12:30PM. Registration is required if you are attending the lunch. For additional information about this workshop please visit: <https://carleton.ca/eureast/events/>

This workshop is supported by Carleton University, by Canada-Europe Transatlantic Dialogue, and by the Jean Monnet Chair in “EU Relations with Russia and the Eastern Neighbourhood” (EUREAST), which receives funding from the Erasmus+ Programme of the European Union.