GOALS OF THE COURSE

Following enlargement of the European Union to include 10 post communist countries of Central and Eastern Europe, the EU's eastern border touched several Soviet successor states (such as Ukraine, Belarus, and Moldova); the EU's border with Russia was also extended to include a shared border with Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Poland, as well as Finland. With these developments, and in the face of Russia's increasing foreign policy assertiveness and Europe's energy dependence on Russia, an important area of the concern for the EU involves relations with its eastern neighbours; furthermore the new EU-Russia frontier represents a possible new dividing line in Europe. The issue has become even more intense since the Ukraine crisis began in late 2013. This course explores the development of relations between the EU and these countries, examining the issue from the perspective of the EU, its member states, and the countries of eastern Europe (including Russia), and the Caucasus.

The course will examine relations between countries with attention to the role of differing norms and values, the role of converging or conflicting interests, and the importance of contrasting governance structures in the EU and Russia. Examples from a range of policy areas will be drawn upon, including border and visa policy, energy policy, economic and trade relations, and responses to 'frozen conflicts' in the post-Soviet space. Implications of Russian initiatives, such as the Eurasian Union, will also be explored. Recent developments will be discussed and analyzed.

The course will be run seminar style. The course may involve guest speakers and (if possible) interactive class sessions with students from Poland (and possibly Germany or Russia). Students are expected play an active role in the life of the class. Completion of course readings, participation in class discussions, class presentations, and a course paper will be required. In most class sessions, a student presentation will provide additional material not covered by required readings, and students will present ideas from position papers on contentious issues.

Requirements:

1. Position papers: Each student is required to write position papers for 2 class session. Each paper is about five pages in length (double-spaced, 12 point font). Page limits should not be exceeded by a significant degree (i.e., no more than 6 pages total). Each paper will argue a position, supported by evidence and sources, related to a specified question relating to the week's topic. The questions are posted on CU Learn. The paper should demonstrate familiarity with the course readings for the week and but be focused around the student's own conclusions and insights. Each position paper is due at 4 p.m. on Tuesday before the relevant class session and may be sent to me by email. Students should be prepared to summarize their position orally in class. A bibliography of works cited should be included, and in-text citations should be used for direct quotes or specific references to the readings. It is not expected that you include readings beyond the required readings for the week, but optional readings may be included if desired. The position papers should NOT be summaries of readings. Papers will be evaluated based on the cogency and clarity of the argument, as well as evidence brought in support of it (including references to course readings). Students may replace their lowest marks with additional reaction papers.

2. Oral presentations: Each student will make an oral presentation in addition to presenting elements of the position papers mentioned above.

This presentation (15-18 minutes) will be related to the topic of a particular class session, to be chosen at the beginning of term. These presentations require extra research beyond the required course readings (usually at least 3 extra articles for each student); in some cases optional readings may be relevant. Particular topics or topic areas will be suggested; however, students may propose other topics for approval. The presentation is meant to inform the class in greater depth about a certain aspect being considered in the class session, as opposed to the position paper, which is arguing a particular position.

There are a number of options for this presentation.

Option 1: An individual presentation.

Option 2: A presentation with another student or students (no more than three students). In this case, each student may present the topic from a particular perspective, e.g., that of the the EU, EU member state, or one or more of its Eastern partners; this could also be a role-playing format on an issue of contention between the parties. Or it can be a more traditional presentation. In the case of joint presentations, the overall length is 15 minutes per participating student. Each student will receive an individual mark, but one third of that mark will be based on coordination of the presentation to form a coherent whole.

Option 3: Presentation in the context of a class session that is videolinked to Poland, or Russia. A student wishing to take this option should discuss this with the instructor early in the term to assure good coordination with the partner class.

Along with the oral presentation, each student must provide either a power-point presentation OR a two-page handout that summarizes the key points of the presentation and that provides a list of sources consulted. If power point is used please email it to me before the class and bring copy on a data stick or in your email; and for handouts provide a copy for each student the day of the presentation.

3. Term research paper (including proposal and presentation):

Each student is required to write a term research paper (16-18 pages), which addresses a topic related to the EU/EU Member States relationship with one or more of the Eastern neighbours. Two types of term paper are welcome:

- a) A research note. This type of paper would provide in-depth research on a particular empirical question and would involve the use of primary sources. It will answer a 'what' or 'how' question. While you will need to explain the importance of what you are researching, the paper does not need to be theory based.
- b) An analytical paper. This paper would explore a particular 'why' or 'how' question, making use of secondary literature, and, if appropriate, some primary sources. This paper should situate the analysis in relevant theories and concepts.

In either case the topic and tentative bibliography for the paper must be handed in for approval by email by February 26 at the start of class. The paper is due on April 13 at noon in hard copy, as well as being sent electronically to my email address.

Term papers may be related to or grow out of but should not duplicate the content of the first oral presentation. Accordingly, sources used for the paper should be in addition to those consulted for the first oral presentation. The instructor reserves the right to require the student to engage in an individual oral discussion on the research paper with the instructor (outside of class sessions) following its submission.

The paper proposal will receive an evaluation of approved/not approved. Proposals that are initially not approved should be revised. However failure to gain approval for the proposal (after revisions, if necessary) may adversely affect the mark on the final paper and on oral presentation II. See below on due dates and penalties for failure to hand in the proposal.

4. Seminar participation

Participation will be graded on the basis of attendance and the quality of regular contributions to the class discussion; familiarity with required course readings will be considered an important criterion of evaluation. Each student will be evaluated according to these criteria during each seminar session.. Please consult with instructor if you are concerned about this element, as I will try to assist in facilitating your participation (also based on the position papers).

Evaluation and Due Dates*

Class presentation and handout/powerpoint (beginning of class)	15%
2 position papers (4 p.m. Tuesday before relevant class)	30%
Term research paper proposal (Feb. 26)	approved/not approved
Term research paper (hard copy, Apr 10 noon)	40%
Class discussion and attendance	15%

*See additional notes below under Due Dates and Penalties

Term papers are to be submitted in hard copy to my office (3307 RB) or to the EURUS departmental office (3302 RB). Position papers can be submitted by email. The handout for the class presentation is due at the beginning of class of the day of the presentation and should be brought to class with a copy for each student and the instructor.

Penalties

Please note the following important rules associated with this course. While these penalties may seem strict, they are intended to assure equal treatment for all students. If you feel you need an extension to a deadline, you may approach me no later than one week before the relevant deadline and I will consider these requests on an individual basis. However, no extensions will be granted for oral presentations or position papers, except for valid medical (or similar) reasons.

- Any student who fails to hand in the term essay or term research paper will receive a failing mark in the course. Penalties for late assignments will be as follows (waived with a valid medical or equivalent excuse):
 - Term essay or research paper: Two points (of a % scale) for each day late (including weekends). No papers accepted after April 20 at noon.
 - Position papers: Papers handed in late (without a valid excuse) but by the beginning of the relevant class session will receive a maximum mark of 80% (of 100%). Papers handed in later than that will receive a maximum mark of 50% (out of 100%). Papers not handed in will receive a “0”. Please keep in mind that you may replace a low mark by handing in an additional paper later in the term.
- Failure to hand in the proposal for the term essay or term research paper will result in a 3% deduction from the overall final mark for the course, or a 2% deduction if handed in more than one week late.

- Students absent on a date of their oral presentation will receive a “0” for the oral component unless a valid medical (or equivalent) excuse is provided. Students who are not able to be present for the presentation must inform the instructor as far as possible in advance of the class.

Summing up: Where now for EU-Russian relations?

Academic Accommodation

You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term because of disability, pregnancy or religious obligations. Please review the course outline promptly and write to me with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist.

It takes time to review and consider each request individually, and to arrange for accommodations where appropriate. Please make sure you respect these timelines particularly for in-class tests, mid-terms and final exams, as well as any change in due dates for papers.

You can visit the Equity Services website to view the policies and to obtain more detailed information on academic accommodation at <http://carleton.ca/equity/accommodation>

Plagiarism

The University Senate defines plagiarism as "to use and pass off as one's own idea or product the work of another without expressly giving credit to another". (Calendar p. 48).

- Copying from another person's work without indicating this through appropriate use of quotations marks and citations of footnotes.
- Lengthy and close paraphrasing of another person's work (i.e. extensive copying interspersed with a few "different" phrases or sentences).
- Submitting written work produced by someone else as if it were one's own work (e.g. another student's term paper, a paper purchased from a commercial term paper "factory", material downloaded via the Internet, etc.)

In an academic environment plagiarism is a serious offence, and it is not a matter that can be dealt with by an informal arrangement between the student and the instructor. In all cases where plagiarism is suspected, instructors are now required to notify their departmental Chair, and the Chair in turn is required to report the matter to the Associate Dean of the Faculty. The Associate Dean makes a formal investigation and then decides on an appropriate sanction. Penalties can range from a mark of zero for the plagiarized work, to a final grade of F for the course, to suspension from all studies, to expulsion from the University. (Students should also be aware that the Senate classifies as an instructional offence the submission of "substantially the same piece of work to two or more courses without the prior written permission of the instructors involved.")

Requests for Academic Accommodations

For Students with Disabilities:

Students with disabilities requiring academic accommodations in this course must register with the Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities for a formal evaluation of disability-related needs.

Registered PMC students are required to contact the centre, 613-520-6608, every term to ensure that I receive your letter of accommodation, no later than two weeks before the first assignment is due or the first in-class test/midterm requiring accommodations.

For Religious Obligations:

Students requesting academic accommodation on the basis of religious obligation should make a formal, written request to their instructor for alternate dates and/or means of satisfying academic requirements.

Such request should be made during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist, but not later than two weeks before the compulsory event.

Accommodation is to be worked out directly and on an individual basis between the student and the instructor(s) involved. Instructors will make accommodations in a way that avoids academic disadvantage to the students.

Students or instructors who have questions or want to confirm accommodation eligibility of a religious event or practice may refer to the Equity Services website for a list of holy days and Carleton's Academic Accommodations policies, or may contact an Equity Services Advisor in the Equity Services Department of assistance.

For Pregnancy:

Pregnant students requiring academic accommodations are encouraged to contact an Equity Advisor in Equity Services to complete a letter of accommodation. The student must then make an appointment to discuss her needs with the instructor at least two weeks prior to the first academic event in which it is anticipated the accommodation will be required.
