Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada

The Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC) promotes and supports university-based research and graduate training in the social sciences and humanities. If you are a citizen or permanent resident of Canada, have completed or are about to complete a bachelor's degree, or are already pursuing a master's degree in the humanities or social sciences, and have achieved a first-class average, as determined by Carleton, in each of the last two years of full-time study or equivalent you may be eligible to apply for a master's scholarship. The value of the award is set at $17,500 for a 12-months period.

Applications are available through the SSHRC website and be submitted in early Fall to the department. The department will then evaluate and rank applications and forward them to the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research for further evaluation. The Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research will then submit the top-ranked applicants from all Faculties to SSHRC. The deadline to submit your application to the department is usually the beginning of October.

The Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research holds information sessions on SSHRC scholarships at the beginning of the Fall term.
