This course provides an introduction to the study of Greek antiquity, the discipline of Classics and its methodologies. The culture and society will be set in historical context and studied through readings from representative ancient authors (in English translation) and through the art and architecture of the period. Precludes additional credit for CLCV 1000, and CLCV 1109.

Required Readings:

Additional readings: Students will also be required to read some primary sources (i.e., literature written by ancient Greek authors). This includes five “books” (i.e., chapters) of Homer, three ancient plays, and one dialogue by Plato. These are not long works and can each be read in a couple hours.

I recommend the following translations which are freely available online, but each work can be found in hard copy most libraries. I don’t mind whose translation you use, but vocabulary, accuracy, and spelling can vary.

Homer’s Iliad Books 1, 23 and 24 (trans. Ian Johnston)

Tests and Exams
No make-up tests or special consideration will be given except for valid medical reasons. The professor must be informed of such cases immediately and appropriate documentation must be produced. Make-up tests are normally scheduled within one week of the original test and at the professor’s convenience. No aids will be allowed on tests in this course. Students will be expected to produce their Carleton Student ID card at the final exam.

Quizzes 1 and 2 will be short answer (multiple choice and short answer). The midterm test and final exam will include some objective questions (multiple choice and / or short answer), and subjective parts (essays and / or commentary passages). You will have some choice in all parts.

WebCT: This course is supported by the WebCT Course Management System. All term work will be returned to students. Marks will be posted on WebCT. All email correspondence with the professor should be carried out through the WebCT email system and using your Carleton student email address. Students will be responsible for reading and responding appropriately to all information posted on WebCT which will be considered to have been released to all registered students within 24 hours of posting.

Schedule of lectures and readings
Fixed points on this schedule are tests; dates and topics may vary. On each test you will be responsible for readings that correspond to lecture topics we have covered in class to that date. I recommend that you read the textbook entirely as quickly as possible and then review relevant parts for topics on tests.
