Course Description:

Ancient Egyptian Art and Architecture is the standard against which all other ancient Mediterranean material is weighed. Egyptian innovations in building and decoration exerted a pivotal influence on Near Eastern traditions, and are the starting point for much in Greek, Roman, Phoenician and Punic art. The Greeks and Romans, particularly, admired Egyptian religion which expressed itself in art that continues to be compelling. The relationship of the Egyptians themselves to the monuments and art they produced is at least as rich and complex: the same objects often convey both public and private meanings that could potentially be in conflict. Egyptian art and architecture is also palimpsestic since successive periods often saw different ruling peoples who added their own traditions to the indigenous matrix.

REGULATIONS COMMON TO ALL HUMANITIES COURSES

COPIES OF WRITTEN WORK SUBMITTED

Always retain for yourself a copy of all essays, term papers, written assignments or take-home tests submitted in your courses.

PLAGIARISM

The University Senate defines plagiarism as “presenting, whether intentional or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one’s own.” This can include:

- reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else’s published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one’s own without proper citation or reference to the original source;
- submitting a take-home examination, essay, laboratory report or other assignment written, in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, or paraphrased material, concepts, or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another’s data or research findings;
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another’s works and/or failing to use quotation marks;
- handing in “substantially the same piece of work for academic credit more than once without prior written permission of the course instructor in which the submission occurs.”

Plagiarism is a serious offence which cannot be resolved directly with the course’s instructor. The Associate Deans of the Faculty conduct a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They can include a final grade of “F” for the course
