Are you a student illustrator or graphic artist interested in youth rights, social justice, and storytelling? We're looking for a creative graphic artist to visually capture key ideas from two high-level discussions on children's and young people's rights taking place at an event at Carleton University.

Children's rights professionals working in academe, policy, legal, advocacy, and practice will be participating. We are looking to translate two discussions into engaging, real-time visual summaries.

Saturday, April 25 (1 hour): 1:00-2:00 pm

Where: 2200 Richcraft Lecture Hall

What: Create visual representations of each discussion; capture key ideas in an accessible, creative format. Deliver final polished versions (digital or physical, depending on your style)

Honorarium: $100 per session (2 hours, plus additional time for light post-session refinement if needed) Materials/supplies negotiable.
