

Carleton University

Institute of Interdisciplinary Studies

Feeding Inequality

A CONVERSATION ABOUT CHILD HUNGER IN CANADA

Monday, December 2nd, 5:30 – 7 pm
Dunton Tower 2017

Refreshments Provided

Kate Cairns is Associate Professor of Childhood Studies at Rutgers University-Camden. Her interdisciplinary research brings a feminist perspective to the politics of childhood, with particular focus on how young people are positioned as the promise or threat of collective futures. She is coauthor, with Josée Johnston, of Food and Femininity (Bloomsbury 2015), and has published widely on issues of food, care work, and environmental justice.

Olfa Karoui is a PhD Candidate at the Faculty of Education at the University of Ottawa. Her research interests focus on studying the impacts of food insecurity on the student experience including the relationship between food insecurity and students' well-being, physical health, and academics both within K-12 and higher education contexts.

