

Smudging Notification

Attention

An Indigenous smudging ceremony will be taking place during the below time:

Date: _____

Time: _____

Carleton University supports Indigenous peoples' rights to observe their spiritual and cultural practices on campus. In alignment with Carleton University Strategic Indigenous Initiatives Committee (CUSIIC), the university strives to foster learning and working environments that are inclusive and welcoming to Indigenous Peoples and ways of knowing and in compliance with legislation and fire prevention standards.

What is Smudging?

Smudging is a spiritual and cultural practice observed by many Indigenous Peoples (First Nations and Métis predominantly) that involves the burning of one or more sacred medicines including, but not limited to, tobacco, sweet grass, sage and/or cedar. The smoke is used to cleanse a room, person or group.

For more information, contact:

Carleton's Fire Prevention Coordinator
at chadthomison@cunet.carleton.ca

Centre for Indigenous Support and Community Engagement
Indigenous@carleton.ca

Centre for Indigenous Support and Community Engagement

Carleton University