a virtual lecture, discussion, and interview with Dr. Paul Finkelman on

Memory and the Holocaust: How We Remember the Holocaust from Survivors and Public Sources

Thursday, November 17,
7pm

Until recently, much of our “memory” of the Holocaust came from survivors who talked about their experiences in public forums and elsewhere. As the number of survivors declines, we must keep the memory alive.

This program will discuss how we remember the Holocaust through movies, interviews, and presentations by the children and the grandchildren of survivors.

Dr. Finkelman is the former President and Chancellor of Gratz College, the oldest independent Jewish College in the United States. He is a nationally known scholar and has published in New York Times, The Washington Post, Jewish Review of Books, USA Today, the New York Daily News, the Baltimore Sun, and the Philadelphia Jewish Exponent.

Please visit the Zelikovitz centre web site to read further about the Dr. Paul Finkelman lecture and about Dr. Lena Allen-Shore as a scholar and as a survivor of the Shoah. carleton.ca/jewishstudies
