CALENDAR COURSE DESCRIPTION

The institutional and social production of criminal law in Canada. Processes, personnel, and agencies in the criminal legal system. The role of discretion and mechanisms of accountability. The accused and the place of the victim. Issues and problems in sentencing and punishment.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course will serve as an introduction to the various parts, procedures, rules, and actors which make up the Canadian criminal legal system. A strong emphasis will be placed on examining past and present issues in criminal law from a social scientific perspective, through both theoretical and empirical lenses. An emphasis will also be placed on critically engaging with and examining these issues, and the criminal justice system as a whole, within larger social and political realities, so as to better understand the connections between social practices and settings and the criminal law. By the end of the course, students are expected to:

- Identify the agencies and organizations that collectively make up the criminal justice system
- Identify the roles, responsibilities and powers of the various actors/participants involved in the criminal justice system.
- Demonstrate a clear understanding of how Canada's current criminal justice system exists in specific post-colonial, historical, geographical, and social contexts, and an ability to critically analyze how these contexts impact the operation of criminal justice law;
- Analyze and discuss the major challenges confronting the criminal justice system, and critically engage with the possibility of alternative approaches within this system

- Demonstrate an ability to approach contemporary criminal justice issues and texts with a critical lens and an open mind.
