COURSE DESCRIPTION

International Trade Regulation provides an introduction to the institutions and rules that govern global trade between states. This course sets out an outline of the basic framework of trade rules as well as the primary principles, concepts and norms that animate international trade law. We will mainly focus on the World Trade Organization and examine selected aspects of international trade law including Most Favored Nation and National Treatment principles, Tariffs, Preferential trade agreements and other key matters that impact trade.

An underlying theme of this course will be to explore the case for, and the challenges to, free trade orthodoxy. As such, this course will also consider issues affecting trade regulation such as labour, environmental and human rights concerns. At the conclusion of this course, students should be familiar with the basic building blocks of the global trading system. In addition, students should also be able to assess any benefits of global free trade as well as understand the issues contributing to a protectionist retreat from current trade arrangements
