Calendar Description:

The history of the relationship between the criminal law system and society. Changing issues in the criminal law and the nature of institutional responses, from medieval to early 19th century England and 19th century Canada.

Detailed Course Description:

This course surveys historical changes in the definition of crime and the administration of criminal law. While the adversarial criminal trial with jury is associated with the medieval origins of the common law, the basic elements of our current criminal justice system reflect relatively recent transformations in law enforcement, the criminal trial and punishment. These transformations are associated with the rise of the modern state and were responses to the effects of industrialization, urbanization, and colonization. The course focuses on 18th and 19th century England, and on the adoptions of the English criminal law and institutions in late 18th and 19th century Canada. Selected issues in criminal law history are also explored including Indigenous experiences, the experience of women, and political trials or national security resorts to the criminal law

Course Organization:

Due to the pandemic, the lectures (previously recorded by CUOL) are delivered asynchronously on the Brightspace course site. Students are expected to complete the required readings set out in the Topics and Readings Schedule below before viewing the lectures each week, and to comply with all deadlines and due dates set out below. High-speed internet access and a computer are therefore required for this course.

REQUIRED READINGS:

All assigned readings can be accessed on the Brightspace course site via ARES (online MacOdrum Library reserves) or as a PDF file. In addition to these readings it is recommended you also review the relevant lecture abstract before each class to situate the readings and to familiarize yourselves with the key points as elaborated in each lecture.
