

REFUGEE RESEARCH OPPORTUNITY IN TANZANIA

The Local Engagement Refugee Research Network (LERRN) is a team of researchers and practitioners committed to promoting protection and solutions with and for refugees. Through collaborative research, training, and knowledge-sharing, we aim to improve the functioning of the global refugee regime and ensure more timely protection and rights-based solutions for refugees.

With the support of funding from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC), we have funding to support collaborative research projects, undertaken by a graduate student from one of our partner Canadian universities (Carleton, McGill, uOttawa and York) and a student selected by our Geographic Working Groups in Jordan, Kenya, Lebanon and Tanzania.

We are now accepting applications for research placements in Tanzania. Registered post-graduate students at Carleton University, McGill University, the University of Ottawa and York University are encouraged to apply. Please see application details below.

GEOGRAPHIC WORKING GROUP (GWG)	Tanzania
GWG LEAD	Janemary Ruhundwa, Executive Director, Dignity Kwanza
AREA OF FOCUS	National Legal Framework
LOCATION FOR RESEARCH	Dar es Salaam, Tanzania
RESEARCH OBJECTIVES AND QUESTIONS
Tanzania's history of hosting refugees dates back some 60 years. Since then, Tanzania has enacted a range of domestic laws to guide the reception of refugees and the rights of refugees on its territory. Tanzania is also party to a number of regional and international agreements that also inform its approach to refugees. This national legal framework has continued to evolve, especially since the Refugees Act of 1998 and the subsequent National Refugee Policy of 2003. In the past 10 years, additional legislation relating to citizenship, labour, immigration and other areas of national competence have further conditioned the legal framework within which the rights of refugees are pursued. Understanding this evolving legal framework, its application and potential gaps in the national legal and regulatory framework, is an important challenge for national civil society actors working with refugees in Tanzania. In response, this research placement will build from a 2009 review of the national legal framework in Tanzania to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - map the range of laws and regulations that affect refugees in Tanzania - identify gaps in the legal and regulatory framework - identify factors that condition the implementation of the national legal framework - make recommendations on revisions or additions to the national legal and regulatory framework in Tanzania. - Create an updated compilation of laws and regulations that affect refugees in Tanzania

RESEARCH METHODS

1. Textual analysis of existing laws and regulatory frameworks
2. Elite interviews with representatives of host and donor governments, international organizations (such as UN agencies), NGOs and other civil society actors to understand the functioning of the current legal and regulatory framework for refugees in Tanzania.

EXPECTED TIMELINE

Fieldwork schedule to be developed in consultation with the Tanzania Working Group, but is expected to last for a 4-week period in Tanzania between June and August 2019.

RESEARCH CONTEXT

For an overview of the refugee context in Tanzania, see: <https://www.unhcr.org/united-republic-of-tanzania.html>

SUPPORT PROVIDED

LERRN will cover the following costs for the successful candidate:

- Economy round-trip airfare to Tanzania
- Necessary domestic travel for the purposes of the project
- Modest accommodation and a stipend for meals for a maximum of four weeks
- The cost of visa, research permit and vaccinations necessary for travel to Tanzania

The Tanzania Working Group will provide support for:

- reception and orientation in Dar es Salaam
- supervision and mentorship during the fieldwork portion of the sub-project
- administrative and logistical support for the in-country process of securing research permits and making necessary travel and logistical arrangements

PARTNER STUDENT

The successful student will collaborate with a graduate student affiliated with the Centre for the Study of Forced Migration in the School of Law at the University of Dar es Salaam to implement this sub-project. Students are expected to collaborate on all aspects of the research, from preparation, fieldwork, and writing preliminary results.

ELIGIBILITY

To be eligible to apply, candidates must:

- Be a registered post-graduate at student Carleton University, McGill University, the University of Ottawa and York University, until 31 December 2019

PARTICIPANT OBLIGATIONS

Students selected for a Research Placement will commit to:

- Attend mandatory training (costs supported by LERRN):
 - 6-9 May 2019 in Toronto
 - 27-31 May 2019 in Ottawa
- Use the LERRN Template Ethics Protocol to secure necessary ethics clearance from their university by 30 April 2019
- Complete the following background preparation by May 2019 (with support of a faculty supervisor at their home university)
 - Readings on theoretical and methodological foundations (to be provided)
 - Desk research on case study and issue area
 - Prepare a short presentation on their research to be presented during the training sessions in Ottawa at the end of May
- Participate in a post-fieldwork self-evaluation and debrief session by 31 October 2019
- Comply with permit and insurance requirements and sign code of conduct
- Contribute to knowledge mobilization through:
 - Submitting a blog posting during fieldwork
 - Give a presentation to local partners at end of fieldwork
 - Upload fieldwork notes and data prior to end of fieldwork
 - Co-author a working paper with partner student by 31 December 2019
 - Be available to present research findings at the LERRN Annual Meeting the following year (typically in May)
- Obtain required visa and vaccinations
- Have passport valid for 12 months following the proposed end of fieldwork

It is recommended that students be certified in basic first-aid before departing for fieldwork

APPLICATION REQUIREMENTS

Submit the following to LERRN@carleton.ca by 9am EST, Monday 25 February 2019
(reference: 'RPP: Tanzania – localization')

- CV
- 250 word statement on your approach to the proposed research
- 250 word statement on your suitability for the position, including a description of previous relevant experience
- Letter of support from a faculty supervisor, including confirmation that you are registered in a post-graduate program at Carleton University, McGill University, the University of Ottawa or York University and that you will be supported by your supervisor at your home university to complete the above Participant Obligations

Interviews will be conducted by Skype or at your home university in mid-March 2019.
Successful candidates will be notified by 31 March 2019.