

SERIES OF 30-MINUTE NOON-HOUR CONCERTS: CARLETON MUSIC IN COLLABORATION WITH THE ROYAL OTTAWA HOSPITAL

Carleton University is pleased to announce a new collaboration with the Royal Ottawa Health Care Centre. Starting in September 2013, the Royal Ottawa Hospital will open its doors to Carleton Music students who are willing to donate their talents for the enjoyment of the ROH's staff and patients. This series is conceived as a way to support the hospital and its mission, to support our students' growth as musicians, and to demonstrate how young musicians can contribute to their community.

Each noon-hour performance will be approximately 20 to 30 minutes in duration, followed by a friendly conversation between the musicians and the patients. One or more student musicians will present each program, on a variety of instruments, in a variety of styles. A quality electric piano is available, as needed.

Mauro Bertoli, Carleton Music's newly-appointed 2013-14 Artist-in-Residence, is the initiator and contact-person for the series.. For further information, and/or to inquire about available dates, please contact Mauro Bertoli at mauro.bertoli@maurobertoli.com

Maestro Bertoli writes:

“The emotional and human experience of listening to live music should be a human right. Don't miss this opportunity to offer both the power of music and your skills and talents to make a difference in the day of someone in need.”
