Overview & objective

This course will introduce you to a number of issues in two main areas of philosophy: epistemology, which is concerned with the distinctiveness and limits of genuine knowledge, and the philosophy of mind, which focuses on the nature of the mind and its relationship to the body. Some of the issues we will explore, such as skepticism about the external world and free will, fall squarely into one or the other of these two areas. Other issues we will explore, such as the problem of other minds and naturalism, fall into both areas.

There are two main objectives in this course. The first is to give you a good, basic understanding of the key issues in epistemology and the philosophy of mind. The second is to develop your capacity to think for yourself, critically and philosophically, about such issues.

Textbook

We will use the following textbook to guide our lectures and discussions in the course:

Brook, A. & R. Stainton. (2000). Knowledge and mind: A philosophical introduction. Cambridge, MA: MIT Press.

If you want your own hard copy of this textbook, I recommend that you search used book sources online; MIT Press has no hard copies available at the moment. However, the MacOdrum University Library provides you as a student with access to a digital copy of the textbook, so you do not need to buy it if you don't care about a hard copy.

To access the digital version of the textbook, simply visit the library's webpage <https://library.carleton.ca/> and do a keyword search in the top search bar for "Brook+Stainton+ 'Knowledge and Mind'" and you will find an online link to the book through Cognet Library Books.

Evaluation

Tests (30+40% = 70% of overall grade).

Throughout the winter term you will be expected to take two scheduled tests. They will be online tests, delivered via Brightspace. Note that you must take the tests at the scheduled times; you won't be able to take them afterwards, and missing one of these test times is like missing a formally scheduled exam. These test times cannot be tailored to individual student personal (including work or travel) schedules. This includes situations where students register in the class late without consulting me: they too must take the tests at the scheduled times, and it is their responsibility to make up as best they can for the lectures they have missed.

In keeping with the main objective of the course, the purpose of these tests is to ensure that you have a good understanding of the issues so-far discussed in the course and are developing your capacity for cogent philosophical reflection. The first test will focus on what we've covered since the start of the course. The second test will focus on what we've covered since the first test. Each test will consist of a number of multiple-choice questions as well as brief essay-style question.

You will have one hour to complete each test. The first test will be worth 30% of your overall grade, the second 40%. The first test will be on January 24 at 2:35 p.m. The second test will be on February 28 at 2:35 p.m.

Note these will be closed-book tests, and that the general rules for university examinations, as listed in Section 4.2 of the Undergraduate Calendar (see <https://calendar.carleton.ca/undergrad/regulations/academicregulationsoftheuniversity/examinations/>) will apply to them.

In-person essay (30% of overall grade).

You will also be expected to write an in-person essay for the course. The essay will be approximately two to three times the length of the brief-essays you write for the tests, but otherwise just the same. You will write this essay in class on March 27 at 2:35 p.m. At the start of that class, I will provide you with two or three questions to choose from; you will choose one of these questions and write your entire essay on that. You will have up to one hour to write the essay.

Note that beyond the in-person essay, there is no final examination for this course.

Schedule

The left column of the following table lists the scheduled weeks of class for the term. The centre column indicates the topics I plan to address in my lectures for each of those weeks. In the right column are the readings from the text corresponding to these topics. This is all meant as only a rough guide, however; chances are good that we will fall behind or move ahead of the scheduled discussions at various points, and the best way for you keep up when we do is to make sure that you attend the lectures regularly.

Department of Philosophy and Carleton University Policies (Fall/Winter 2023-24)

Assignments:

Please follow your professor's instructions on how assignments will be handled electronically. There will be NO hard copies placed in the essay box this coming year.

Evaluation:

Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by the instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Deferrals for Term Work:

If students are unable to complete term work because of illness or other circumstances beyond their control, they should contact their course instructor no later than three working days of the due date. Normally, any deferred term work will be completed by the last day of the term. Term work cannot be deferred by the Registrar.

Deferrals for Final Exams:

Students are expected to be available for the duration of a course including the examination period. Occasionally, students encounter circumstances beyond their control where they may not be able to write a final examination or submit a take-home examination. Examples of this would be a serious illness or the death of a family member. If you miss a final examination and/or fail to submit a take-home examination by the due date, you may apply for a deferral no later than three working days after the original due date (as per the University Regulations in Section 4.3 of the Undergraduate Calendar). Visit the Registrar's Office for further information.

Plagiarism:

It is the responsibility of each student to understand the meaning of 'plagiarism' as defined in the Undergraduate or Graduate Calendars, and to avoid both committing plagiarism and aiding or abetting plagiarism by other students. (Section 10.1 of the Undergraduate Calendar Academic Regulations)

Academic Accommodation:

You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term:

- Pregnancy or religious obligation: write to your professor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details visit the EDC website.
- Academic accommodations for students with disabilities: The Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) provides services to students with Learning Disabilities (LD), psychiatric/mental health disabilities, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD), chronic medical conditions, and impairments in mobility, hearing, and vision. If you have a disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact PMC at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation. If you are already registered with the PMC, contact your PMC coordinator to send your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term, and no later than two weeks before the first in-class test or exam requiring accommodation. After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with your professor to ensure accommodation arrangements are made.
- Survivors of Sexual Violence: As a community, Carleton University is committed to maintaining a positive learning, working and living environment where sexual violence will not be tolerated, and where survivors are supported through academic accommodations as per Carleton's Sexual Violence Policy.
- Accommodation for Student Activities: Carleton University recognizes the substantial benefits, both to the individual student and for the university, that result from a student participating in activities beyond the classroom experience. Reasonable accommodation must be provided to students who compete or perform at the national or international level. Please contact your instructor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist.
