Overview & objective

We are regularly called upon to assess the reasoning of others as well as to reason for ourselves. To have the skills required to do these things well is to have good critical thinking skills, and the main objective of this course is to encourage you to develop these skills.

Particular topics we will address as we pursue this objective include the importance of good reasoning, how arguments relate to reasoning and how to detect them, useful tools for clarifying the premises, conclusions, and structures of arguments, the main criteria of a good argument and how to assess whether an argument meets them, fallacies of argumentation and reasoning, important forms of both deductive and inductive reasoning, strategies for replying to bad reasoning, irrational techniques of persuasion that sometimes masquerade as good forms of reasoning, and the application critical thinking skills to reasoning about moral matters.

Textbook

There is one required textbook for this course:

Hughes, W. & J. Lavery. (2015). Critical thinking: An introduction to the basic skills (concise edition). Peterborough, ON: Broadview Press.

This textbook is available for purchase at the University Bookstore (ground floor, University Centre; <https://www.bkstr.com/carletonstore>). Readings from the textbook that correspond to the material covered in the class lectures are referred to in the right column of the Schedule below.

Attendance

The lectures in this course contain material beyond what can be found in the textbook. They also help you to engage the textbook much better (e.g., by helping you appreciate what central and what is merely peripheral in it). Please keep in mind, accordingly, that lecture attendance is very important in this course. You should expect to do well in the course only if you regularly attend the lectures.

Evaluation

Throughout the term you will be expected to take three tests, all delivered on Brightspace. The tests will consist partly of multiple-choice questions and partly of the kinds of questions found in the textbook's "self-test" exercises. You will have one hour to complete each test. The first and third tests will each be worth 30% of your overall grade. The second test, which I expect to cover the most material in the course, will be worth 40%. The first test will be on Jan 26 at 8:35 a.m., the second on March 1 at 8:35 a.m., and the third on March 27 at 8:35 a.m. Beyond the third test, there is no final examination for this course.

Note that you must take the tests at the scheduled times; you won't be able take them afterwards, and missing one of these test times is like missing a formally scheduled exam. These test times cannot be tailored to individual student personal (including work or travel) schedules. This includes situations where students register in the class late without consulting me: they too must take the tests at the scheduled times, and it is their responsibility to make up as best they can for the lectures they have missed. In keeping with the main objective of the course, the purpose of these tests is to ensure that you are developing the relevant critical thinking skills as the course progresses.

Assignments:

Please follow your professor's instructions on how assignments will be handled electronically. There will be NO hard copies placed in the essay box this coming year.

Evaluation:

Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by the instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Deferrals for Term Work:

If students are unable to complete term work because of illness or other circumstances beyond their control, they should contact their course instructor no later than three working days of the due date. Normally, any deferred term work will be completed by the last day of the term. Term work cannot be deferred by the Registrar.

Deferrals for Final Exams:

Students are expected to be available for the duration of a course including the examination period. Occasionally, students encounter circumstances beyond their control where they may not be able to write a final examination or submit a take-home examination. Examples of this would be a serious illness or the death of a family member. If you miss a final examination and/or fail to submit a take-home examination by the due date, you may apply for a deferral no later than three working days after the original due date (as per the University Regulations in Section 4.3 of the Undergraduate Calendar). Visit the Registrar's Office for further information.

Plagiarism:

It is the responsibility of each student to understand the meaning of 'plagiarism' as defined in the Undergraduate or Graduate Calendars, and to avoid both committing plagiarism and aiding or abetting plagiarism by other students. (Section 10.1 of the Undergraduate Calendar Academic Regulations)

Academic Accommodation:

You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term:

- Pregnancy or religious obligation: write to your professor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details visit the EDC website.
- Academic accommodations for students with disabilities: The Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) provides services to students with Learning Disabilities (LD), psychiatric/mental health disabilities, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD), chronic medical conditions, and impairments in mobility, hearing, and vision. If you have a disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact PMC at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation. If you are already registered with the PMC, contact your PMC coordinator to send your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term, and no later than two weeks before the first in-class test or exam requiring accommodation. After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with your professor to ensure accommodation arrangements are made.
- Survivors of Sexual Violence: As a community, Carleton University is committed to maintaining a positive learning, working and living environment where sexual violence will not be tolerated, and where survivors are supported through academic accommodations as per Carleton's Sexual Violence Policy.
- Accommodation for Student Activities: Carleton University recognizes the substantial benefits, both to the individual student and for the university, that result from a student participating in activities beyond the classroom experience. Reasonable accommodation must be provided to students who compete or perform at the national or international level. Please contact your instructor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist.
