PHIL 2020 Practical Philosophy: The Social Contract
Winter 2019 Tuesday/Thursday, 1:05-2:25
Vida Panitch vida.panitch@carleton.ca
Office hours: Paterson 3A55 by appointment

Official Calendar Description:
PHIL 2020 [0.5 credit]
Issues in Practical Philosophy
Issues drawn from ethics, social and political philosophy, and related fields will be examined through careful study of significant philosophical texts after 1900, along with some ensuing debates.
Prerequisite(s): enrolment in Honours or Combined Honours Philosophy programs, or in philosophy, Ethics, and Public Affairs, or permission of the Department.
Lectures and discussion three hours a week.

Course Overview:
Social Contract Theory (SCT) addresses itself to a key question of practical philosophy, namely, what is the source of the state’s legitimacy, and thus the source of our duty to obey it. According to SCT, the legitimate authority of government is grounded in the hypothetical consent of the governed, where the form and content of this consent derives from the idea of contract or mutual agreement. Proponents of the theory have provided diverse and conflicting accounts of the nature of consent and the conditions under which it should be given, as well as diverse conceptions of what it means for a legitimate state to treat all those on whom it depends for its authority with an equal concern and respect. This course will track the development of social contract theory from the ancient period to the present, while exploring some of its moral and political limitations. SCT is central to the broad terrain of practical philosophy as it connects abstract conceptual ideas of justice to matters of significant practical concern.

Course Assignments:
There will be three essay assignments for this course, one group presentation, and a final take-home exam. The essays will be 3-4 pages in length; and in them students will be asked to reconstruct, in logical form, a key argument from course materials, and to raise a brief criticism of the argument. The purpose of these assignments is to accustom new philosophers to the basic structure of analytic philosophical writing. For their case study presentations students will work in pairs/groups and present on a topic/issue of ongoing practical concern to which they will apply the philosophical view under consideration. They will thereby gain the experience of applying philosophical learning to case studies of practical import. More information on both the essay format and the presentation is available below the course schedule. We will also devote a day of class in January to discussing both types of assignments. The final take-home exam will be essay based and will require that students explain and engage critically with course materials.
Grade Breakdown:
- Essay 1: 15% Due February 7
- Essay 2: 15% Due March 7
- Essay 3: 15% Due April 4
- Case Study Presentation: 14% Sign up on CU Learn by January 24
- Attendance on presentations days: 6%
- Take-home exam: 35% Posted on April 4, due on April 27

Essays:

There are three essays for this course. They will be 3-4 pages in length, and due on the dates identified in the course schedule. We will spend time as a class discussing the requirements of philosophical writing on January 30th. Your TA will also hold office hours throughout the term to discuss the expectations of philosophical writing further.

In your essays you will be asked to 1) schematize, 2) exposit and 3) evaluate a text, or portion thereof. To schematize means to reproduce an argument in its logical form: identifying its ultimate conclusion and supporting premises. You should use as few premises as possible and organize them in the most logical order possible. To exposit means to explain, using your own words, the author’s argument. You can elaborate here on the schema’s structure, explain the author’s intentions and identify any missing premises (that the author may need or assume but not actually include). And finally, to evaluate means to critically engage with the argument. Is it valid (if the premises are true, does the conclusion follow)? Is it sound (are the premises and conclusion all true)? What challenges can you raise against one of the argument’s premises, or its conclusion, and what implications does this challenge have for the argument as a whole?

Case Study Presentations:

Students will work in groups of 2 or 3 and give presentations of 25 minutes, including time for discussion, on one of the designated presentation days. Students must sign-up on CU Learn for their preferred presentation date and must contact me regarding the practical topic of their presentation no later than one week before their presentation date. When your group selects a topic let me know right away and I will mark it as having been reserved and not available to the other groups on your day. Note that the topics suggested below are merely suggestions, and also that each topic could work for one author as easily as for any of the others.
The purpose of your case study presentation is to identify the practical relevance of philosophical ideas, and to demonstrate the effectiveness of employing philosophical methodology to addressing intractable social problems. Through the application of philosophical ideas and methodology to social and political problems, we are best able to appreciate the essential role they can play in practical problem-solving across a diversity of professional fields.

In your presentation you should: 1) explain the nature of the practical dilemma and the moral, social, political, and/or legal issues it raises; 2) exposit the relevant author’s views; 3) apply the author’s views to the dilemma, and suggest how the author’s views might help resolve the dilemma in question; 4) evaluate the appropriateness and validity of the author’s views as applied to the dilemma.
Assignments:

Unless specifically told otherwise by their instructors, students:

- Must not use a plastic or cardboard cover or paper clips.
- Must staple the paper (there is a stapler on the essay box).
- Must include the following on the first page: student name and number; course name and number; instructor’s name.
- No assignments will be accepted after the last day for handing in term work – see dates below.

- Assignments handed in through the essay box (just inside the glass doors, Paterson Hall, Floor 3A) must be dropped into the box by 4:15 on a regular business day in order to be date-stamped with that day’s date. Assignments handed in after 4:15 or on a non-business day will be stamped as having been handed in on the next business day.
- Students are required to keep copies of their assignments. If your paper is lost at any point, you will be considered not to have submitted it if you cannot produce a copy immediately on request.

Evaluation:

Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by the instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Deferrals for Final Exams:

If you miss a final examination (formally scheduled or take-home) because of circumstances beyond your control, you may apply for a deferral. You must apply within 3 working days after the scheduled date of your formally scheduled exam or within 3 working days after the due date of a take-home exam.
