The Seven Questions (Instructor Version)

1. Would students have difficulties accessing courses materials or participating in any essential activities related to this class?

2. Are there major areas of confusion or inconsistency among course objectives, your expectation and/or how the course is presented?

3. Does the course offer enough choices in how it is presented so that a student could, to a certain extent, approach the course in a way that suited their needs and abilities?

4. Are there obstacles to receiving or understanding the information and resources needed in this course?

5. Do students feel respected as persons, welcome to express their thoughts and able to explore new ideas in this course?

6. While students participate in this course, are there physical challenges or obstacles that could be avoided?

7. Are there any materials or activities in this course that might be inappropriate or unsuitable for your students?
The Seven Questions (Student Version)

1. Did you have difficulties accessing course materials or participating in any essential activities related to this class?

2. Were there major areas of confusion or inconsistency among course objective, your own expectations and/or how the course was presented?

3. Did you find that the course offered you enough choices in how it was presented so that you could, to a certain extent, approach the course in a way that suited your needs and abilities?

4. Were there obstacles to your receiving or understanding the information and resources you needed in this course?

5. Did you feel respected as a person, welcome to express your thoughts and able to explore new ideas in this course?

6. While participating in this course, were there physical challenges or obstacles that you feel could have been avoided?

7. Did you find any of the materials or activities in this course to be inappropriate or unsuitable?