I. Course Description
This course engages with theories and issues of international security with a special concentration on studies in terrorism. In addition to conventional international security topics, the course will cover theories and debates on terrorism and its impact on contemporary global security. International security is conventionally studied through the lens of traditional International Relations (IR) theories, and as an interstate and grand strategy issue. However, following the end of the Cold War and the emergence and expansion of new security problems have challenged the conventional wisdom and motivated scholars to extend the sphere of security studies to intrastate and asymmetric problems. The core objective of this course is connecting conventional theories to new problems by combining theoretical and empirical material on international security. The course begins with a broad overview of main international security theories and conventional security issues followed by sessions on new international security problems particularly terrorism. Thus, the course includes both theoretical and empirical material and provides a space for students to study global security problems from an interdisciplinary perspective. In this course, students will learn:

- conventional approaches to international security
- challenge to conventional approaches
- international security in the post-Cold War era
- theories and debates on terrorism, its causes and types, and its impact on contemporary global security

At the end of the course, students are expected to express an in-depth understanding of main international security theories and issues and critically engage in debates on contemporary international security problems.
II. Course Evaluation

Course evaluation includes participation, presentation, and research grades and will be calculated on the following basis:

A) Class Participation 30%
Class participation is a critical component of this course. Classes are structured in a “seminar” format and, therefore, it is expected that every student comes prepared to engage in class discussion. Participation should be constructive, critical, and respectful. Both the quality and quantity of your participation will be taken into consideration and lack of participation would be considered as a lack of preparation. The purpose of class participation is to critically engage with course material and respectfully exchange understanding of assigned readings.

B. Presentation 10%
Each student must present an analysis of one of the required readings in approximately 10 minutes during sessions 2 to 11. Presentations will be assigned in session 1. Each seminar contains three to four readings and each student is required to provide a 10-minute oral presentation of one article. Students are expected to present in such a way that provides a snapshot of the article. Presentations should cover the main argument(s), the research approach/method, the theory, and the overall contribution of the assigned article. A simple summarization of the assigned reading will not be considered a successful presentation. Your presentation should, generally, respond three questions: what is the paper about, how is it researched/written, and why is it important. Students also need to provide a critique of the assigned article and connect it to other readings of the class highlighting their similarities and differences.

C. Research Proposal 15%
Proposals are an introduction to the course’s major research project and should clearly address three main questions as follows: What is the research about? How do you conduct it? Why is the proposed topic worth researching? Every proposal should contain a clear research question, a hypothesis, a theoretical framework, and a potential bibliography of at least 5 to 6 scholarly sources including books and journal articles (students can select relevant sources from this syllabus). Proposals should not exceed 5 double-spaced pages. Students may select topics closely related to their presentations or another independent topic related to the themes of the course. Students are required to consult the instructor in selecting their topics of interest. Proposals are due as hard copy at the beginning of class and must be submitted no later than October 7.

D. Research Paper 45%
Students are required to build on their research proposals and write a research paper which should be 4,000 to 4,500 words long including references and footnotes (13-15 pages double-spaced). Topics of interest could include international security theories and security problems or both. In either case, students are required to address both theoretical and empirical dimensions of the assigned topic. In other words, theory papers should use empirical evidence/research to support the argument, and empirical papers should be designed within a clear methodological and/or theoretical framework. Papers should be organized in a “journal article” style and include introduction, discussion, and conclusion sections. Students are expected to review the relevant literature, indicate the literature gap, and state their argument as filling the gap. Research papers are due as hard copy and must be submitted in the beginning of the last session on December 6. Papers must include 12 to 15 scholarly sources (i.e. journal articles and book chapters) – relevant sources from this syllabus are acceptable. Citations should follow the Chicago Manual of Style (Author-Date Style).
III. Course Topics and Schedule

Session 1 (September 9): Course Introduction
In this introductory session, the instructor reviews the syllabus and presents the organization, requirements, and purpose of the course in detail. Presentations will be assigned during the session, therefore, it is expected that students come prepared with potential topics for presentation.

Session 2 (September 16): International Security: Concept and Debate
In this session, we will discuss the concept, theory, and development of international security. The concentration will be on: What is international security? How did it develop? How the state-centric approach to international security explains contemporary problems and how it is challenged?

REQUIRED READING

Session 3 (September 23): Approaches to International Security
The readings assigned for this session provide a broad overview of the realist, neoliberal, constructivist, and post-structural approaches to international security studies. In this class, we will discuss and compare debates and arguments of the four schools of IR on international security.

REQUIRED READING

Session 4 (September 30): Nuclear Rivalry: A Major Cold War Issue
During the Cold War nuclear proliferation, nuclear rivalry, and deterrence became dominant international security topics. This session provides a broad overview of the scholarly debate on nuclear rivalry and deterrence and their relevance to the contemporary international security.

REQUIRED READING
Session 5 (October 7): State Fragility: A post-Cold War Security Problem
Following the end of the Cold War, state fragility has become a serious international security problem. Fragile states affect the security of their neighboring countries and provide favorable conditions for the development of international terrorist organizations and different forms of organized-crime networks. In this session, we will discuss the root causes of state fragility and its development into a global security problem.

REQUIRED READING

(October 14) Thanksgiving Holiday, no class

Session 6 (October 28): International Security in a “Unipolar” World
In this session, we will discuss international security in a “unipolar” context. The required readings for this session focus on the “peacefulness” of the unipolar system from different perspectives.

REQUIRED READING

Session 7 (November 4): Canadian Security: past and present
In this session we will discuss international security from a Canadian perspective. The readings assigned for this class provide a broad overview of Canada’s security concerns, policies, and objectives in the past, present, and future.

REQUIRED READING
Session 8 (November 11): Terrorism: An Emerging Global Security Issue
This session concentrates on terrorism as an emerging international security problem. Although we will discuss the concept of terrorism in its broad sense a special concentration will be on “Islamist-oriented-terrorism” as a post-Cold War international security problem. The readings provide a broad overview of the emergence and expansion of terrorist organizations and examine their impact on contemporary international security.

REQUIRED READING

Session 9 (November 18): Terrorist Organizations: Al-Qaeda & Islamic State
This session introduces students with two major cases of Islamist orient terrorism, al-Qaeda and Islamic State (IS), also known as Islamic State of Iraq and Syria/the Levant (ISIS/ISIL). The discussion concentrates on causes, evolution, and objectives of the two organizations.

REQUIRED READING

Session 10 (November 25): Homegrown/Domestic Terrorism
In this session, we will discuss the emergence of “homegrown terrorism” also labeled as “domestic terrorism” in North America and Europe. The readings assigned for this session examine the process and trajectories of radicalization in the “West,” the emergence and activities of homegrown terrorists, and their links to the main terrorist organizations.

REQUIRED READING
Session 11 (December 2): Cyberterrorism
This session introduces students with an emerging issue in terrorism studies, cyberterrorism. In this session we will discuss the concept of cyberterrorism, the threat it poses to international security, and the intersection between technology and security.

REQUIRED READING

Session 12 (December 6): Course Overview
In this last session, the course will be overviewed; global security and contemporary security problems will be generally discussed. Research paper is due in class.

Academic Accommodations

Requests for Academic Accommodation
You may need special arrangements to meet your academic obligations during the term. For an accommodation request, the processes are as follows:

Pregnancy obligation
Please contact your instructor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details, visit the Equity Services website: carleton.ca/equity/wp-content/uploads/Student-Guide-to-Academic-Accommodation.pdf

Religious obligation
Please contact your instructor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. For more details, visit the Equity Services website: carleton.ca/equity/wp-content/uploads/Student-Guide-to-Academic-Accommodation.pdf

Academic Accommodations for Students with Disabilities
If you have a documented disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact the Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation or contact your PMC coordinator to send your instructor your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term. You must also contact the PMC no later than two weeks before the first in-class scheduled test or exam requiring accommodation (if applicable). After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with your instructor as soon as possible to ensure accommodation arrangements are made. carleton.ca/pmc

Survivors of Sexual Violence
As a community, Carleton University is committed to maintaining a positive learning, working and living environment where sexual violence will not be tolerated, and is survivors are supported through academic accommodations as per Carleton’s Sexual Violence Policy. For more information about the services available at the university and to obtain information about sexual violence and/or support, visit: carleton.ca/sexual-violence-support

Accommodation for Student Activities
Carleton University recognizes the substantial benefits, both to the individual student and for the university, that result from a student participating in activities beyond the classroom experience. Reasonable accommodation must be provided to students who compete or perform at the national or international level. Please contact your instructor with any requests for academic accommodation during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist. https://carleton.ca/senate/wp-content/uploads/Accommodation-for-Student-Activities-1.pdf

For more information on academic accommodation, please contact the departmental administrator or visit: students.carleton.ca/course-outline

Plagiarism
The University Senate defines plagiarism as “presenting, whether intentional or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one’s own.” This can include:

- reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else’s published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one’s own without proper citation or reference to the original source;
- submitting a take-home examination, essay, laboratory report or other assignment written, in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, or paraphrased material, concepts, or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another’s data or research findings;
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another’s works and/or failing to use quotation marks;
- handing in "substantially the same piece of work for academic credit more than once without prior written permission of the course instructor in which the submission occurs.

Plagiarism is a serious offence which cannot be resolved directly with the course’s instructor. The Associate Deans of the Faculty conduct a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They may include a mark of zero for the plagiarized work or a final grade of "F" for the course. Student or professor materials created for this course (including presentations and posted notes, labs, case studies, assignments and exams) remain the intellectual property of the author(s). They are intended for personal use and may not be reproduced or redistributed without prior written consent of the author(s).

Submission and Return of Term Work
Papers must be submitted directly to the instructor according to the instructions in the course outline and will not be date-stamped in the departmental office. Late assignments may be submitted to the drop box in the corridor outside B640 Loeb. Assignments will be retrieved every business day at 4 p.m., stamped with that day’s date, and then distributed to the instructor. For essays not returned in class please attach a stamped, self-addressed envelope if you wish to have your assignment returned by mail. Final exams are intended solely for the purpose of evaluation and will not be returned.

Grading
Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor, subject to the approval of the faculty Dean. Final standing in courses will be shown by alphabetical grades. The system of grades used, with corresponding grade points is:

Approval of final grades
Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor subject to the approval of the Faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by an instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean.

Carleton E-mail Accounts
All email communication to students from the Department of Political Science will be via official Carleton university e-mail accounts and/or cuLearn. As important course and University information is distributed this way, it is the student’s responsibility to monitor their Carleton and cuLearn accounts.

Carleton Political Science Society
"The Carleton Political Science Society (CPSS) has made its mission to provide a social environment for politically inclined students and faculty. By hosting social events, including Model Parliament, debates, professional development sessions and more, CPSS aims to involve all political science students at Carleton University. Our mandate is to arrange social and academic activities in order to instill a sense of belonging within the Department and the larger University community. Members can benefit through our networking opportunities, academic engagement initiatives and numerous events which aim to complement both academic and social life at Carleton University.
