

INSTITUTE OF POLITICAL ECONOMY

VISITING PROFESSOR – EARLY SUMMER 2014

The Institute of Political Economy's Visiting Professor for the early summer* 2014 term is Professor Marianne Marchand. Professor Marchand is Research Chair in International Relations, Universidad de las Américas-Puebla, Mexico. She will teach one cross-listed course for the Institute of Political Economy, and one course for the Department of Political Science:

PECO 5501/PSCI 5501/SOCI 5504

Gendered Political Economy

This course will look at the field of political economy through a gender lens. It will look at central concepts and issues of political economy, such as trade, finance, the market, and the state, and non-traditional themes including consumerism, everyday life, and geographies of marginality.

Tuesdays and Thursdays, 2:35 – 5:25 p.m.

PSCI 5915

The Political Economy of Migration

This course takes a political economy approach to understanding and analyzing complex migration processes. It will address such themes as the development of a migration industry, the migration-development nexus, the political economy of border securitization, ethnic entrepreneurship and the political economy of migrant communities.

Tuesdays and Thursdays, 9:35 a.m. – 12:25 p.m.

*early summer term runs from May 5 to June 17th

Please contact political_economy@carleton.ca for details.