Office Hours: Monday, 10:00 am – 11:30 am, or by appointment

Course Description

This course will critically examine and assess the ways in which ‘vulnerability’ and ‘need’ are understood and constructed in/by our political economic systems. More specifically, we will explore how subjects and their needs are constituted and shaped by capitalism and other intersecting systems of power (e.g., patriarchy, capitalism, heteronormativity), and we will track the political-economic processes through which certain vulnerabilities and needs are hidden, obfuscated, or marginalized, while others are centred. Lastly, we will consider alternative arrangements for responding to individual and community vulnerabilities.

Course Objectives

By the completion of this course, students will be expected to:

1. Identify and explain key theoretical perspectives on ‘vulnerability’ and ‘need’, especially in relation to the field of political economy.
2. Critically reflect on the relationship between our political economic systems, our vulnerabilities, and needs, and the ways in which we address or respond to these vulnerabilities and needs.
3. Enhance their academic skills of critical reading, research, writing, and presentations.

Required Course Materials

All course material will be available either through ARES, MacOdrum Library, or posted on Brightspace.

Office Hours and Emails

Office hours will be held on Mondays, 10-11:30 am. I will also often be available to meet after class. I try to answer emails within 24 hours, although this is not always possible. If you have a question about an assignment, it is therefore important that you email me at least 72 hours (and really, the earlier the better) before the assignment is due to ensure that I can respond in time.

Course Evaluation

Class Participation	15%
Class Presentation	20%
Critical Review Essay	20%
Final Paper Presentation	15%
Final Paper	30%
Total	100%

Class Participation (15%): Due date: Ongoing

Students are expected to attend all classes, read the assigned texts prior to class meetings, and participate actively and regularly in class discussions. Class participation will be evaluated based on the quality and quantity of contributions to class discussions, with particular emphasis on quality. Quality contributions to class discussions should demonstrate that you can analytically and critically engage with the themes, ideas, issues, and (dis)connections between the readings.

Class Presentation (20%): Due date: To be determined

Each student will be responsible for beginning a seminar with a class presentation. Specifically, each student must give one in-class presentation of about 20 minutes introducing and responding to the required readings (and optionally, recommended readings) for a particular class. You will sign up for the date of your presentation in the first class. Note that the class presentation should not simply summarize the readings. Instead, the class presentation should

- (a) discuss how the readings relate to each other (as well as to other themes discussed in the course);
- (b) present analytical and critical reflections on individual readings or the general approaches under discussion; and
- (c) raise questions about the readings for class discussion. It is essential that your presentation is not a mere summary of the readings, as it is expected that all students will have read the material prior to the class.

I am happy to meet with you before your presentation to help you plan.

Critical Review Essay (20%): Due date: To be determined

Each student must write one critical review essay (5 pages double spaced plus bibliography). The review essay must provide a critical analysis and assessment of the assigned readings for a week of your choice. Your review essay must provide a coherent argument, including a thesis statement, and must engage with at least two of the readings for the chosen week. You may use either required or recommended readings; you may not use any outside sources. The purpose of the critical review essay is to reflect exclusively on the readings for a given week. You cannot write your critical review essay for the same week as your class presentation. The review essay is due, in hard copy, at the beginning of the class on the day your chosen readings will be discussed.

Resubmission Option:

Each student will have the option to revise and resubmit their critical review essay. You have until the last day of classes (April 10th) to submit your revised essay. Please submit your revised essays directly to me (hard copy); please also include the original essay so that I can assess how you've responded to the feedback.

One of the most important writing skills you can develop involves receiving feedback, assessing and considering the feedback, and then re-working your paper in light of the concerns raised by the reviewer/evaluator. My hope is that this option gives you a chance to develop these important skills, which will serve you well in a number of endeavors (both academic and professional).

In general, if you wish to resubmit the essay, the idea is to take my feedback and comments, and then rework your essay to strengthen it based on any issues I raised. I am happy to talk with you if you would like to pursue this option and need some help getting going. And, of course, this is completely optional - if you are happy with your work, or simply don't have time to revisit, that's entirely alright. Furthermore, no one will be penalized for taking this option (that is, if by some chance your grade on your revised essay is lower than the original, I will keep the original grade. More simply, I will always keep the higher grade.)

Final Paper Presentation (15%): Due date: To be determined (April 1st or April 8th)

Each student will present a draft of their final paper to the class during the last two weeks of classes. This presentation will provide you with an opportunity to share your work with your peers, and to receive constructive feedback as you complete your final paper. I will determine a presentation schedule after receiving your paper outlines. This presentation should be about 8-10 minutes, followed by 5-7 minutes of questions and feedback.

Final Paper (30%): Due date: April 10th

You are required to write a final paper, 20 pages double spaced, on a topic of your choice related to the course themes. It may be a theoretical discussion or applied analysis. The paper must be emailed to me by 11:59 pm on Wednesday, April 10th.

Plagiarism

Carleton's Academic Integrity Policy defines plagiarism as “presenting, whether intentional or not, the ideas, expression of ideas or work of others as one's own.” This includes reproducing or paraphrasing portions of someone else's published or unpublished material, regardless of the source, and presenting these as one's own without proper citation or reference to the original source. Examples of sources from which the ideas, expressions of ideas or works of others may be drawn from include, but are not limited to: books, articles, papers, websites, literary compositions and phrases, performance compositions, chemical compounds, art works, laboratory reports, research results, calculations and the results of calculations, diagrams, constructions, computer reports, computer code/software, material on the internet and/or conversations.

Examples of plagiarism include, but are not limited to:

- any submission prepared in whole or in part, by someone else;
- using ideas or direct, verbatim quotations, paraphrased material, algorithms, formulae, scientific or mathematical concepts, or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment in any academic assignment;
- using another's data or research findings without appropriate acknowledgement;
- submitting a computer program developed in whole or in part by someone else, with or without modifications, as one's own; and
- failing to acknowledge sources through the use of proper citations when using another's work and/or failing to use quotations marks.

Plagiarism is a serious offence which cannot be resolved directly with the course's instructor. The Associate Deans of the Faculty conduct a rigorous investigation, including an interview with the student, when an instructor suspects a piece of work has been plagiarized. Penalties are not trivial. They may include a mark of zero for the plagiarized work or a final grade of "F" for the course.

 Artificial intelligence text generator tools (also known as large language models) are not permitted to be used in any assessments for this course. Any use of such tools will be considered academic misconduct in this course.**

<https://carleton.ca/registrar/academic-integrity/>.

Intellectual property

Student or professor materials created for this course (including presentations and posted notes, labs, case studies, assignments and exams) remain the intellectual property of the author(s). They are intended for personal use and may not be reproduced or redistributed without prior written consent of the author(s).

Submission and Return of Term Work

Papers must be submitted directly to the instructor according to the instructions in the course outline. The departmental office will not accept assignments submitted in hard copy.

Grading

Standing in a course is determined by the course instructor, subject to the approval of the faculty Dean. This means that grades submitted by an instructor may be subject to revision. No grades are final until they have been approved by the Dean. Final standing in courses will be shown by alphabetical grades. The system of grades used, with corresponding grade points is:
