COURSE DESCRIPTION/INSTRUCTORS STATEMENT

This online course has been designed for graduate students who would like to learn about qualitative research methods and how these approaches may complement their current or future programs of research in various domains of quantitative psychology. Students will learn about the theoretical, conceptual, and philosophical underpinnings of qualitative research, and develop the skills necessary to effectively plan for and integrate qualitative approaches in a quantitative program of research or research study. This course is best suited for students who are new to qualitative research methods.

EVALUATION

Evaluation of students will be based on online self-assessments, class participation, presentations, and a final assignment.

TEXT

Braun V. & Clarke V. (2022). Thematic Analysis: A Practical Guide. In addition, students will be assigned readings from the published literature.
