COURSE DESCRIPTION/INSTRUCTOR'S STATEMENT

This course explores the role of gender in understanding, preventing, and treating youth and adult crime. Students are asked to critically evaluate the usefulness of gender neutral as well as gender centered perspectives in the explanation, prevention, and treatment of girls, women and gender diverse populations who encounter the criminal legal system. The course operates from a psychological and developmental perspective. It seeks to examine gender differences in antisocial behaviour, criminal conduct, and crime desistance across the life span.

EVALUATION

A combination of writing assignments (e.g., a final research paper), and oral presentations will form the basis of evaluation. Students are also evaluated based on their participation in class.

TEXT
