“...but it is the nature of stars to cross, and never was Shakespeare more wrong than when he had Cassius note, ‘The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves.’ Easy enough to say when you're a Roman nobleman (or Shakespeare!), but there is no shortage of fault to be found amid our stars.”
-‘Peter Van Houten’ in John Greene
Course Description

Throughout human history religion has played a central role in the organization of political, economic, and social relations. Religion has served as a powerful political tool and a mechanism of social control; but it has also served as a popular source of resistance, social cohesion, meaning making, and social change. This course will primarily examine whether or not religion remains a dominant social institution today. Students will be introduced to various theoretical and empirical approaches to the Anthropological study of religion. Students will undertake a diverse and cross-cultural study of religious organizations, institutions, and sacred power as they intersect with major elements of the global religious landscape including: culture, secularity, questions of evil and morality, diversity, new religious movements, technology, pop culture, and politics. This course offers students a valuable opportunity to observe theory in action as it unfolds in the religious case studies they will encounter in readings, in-class activities, and assignments. Students will ask themselves how what they are learning in the classroom will help them in their ‘everyday’ encounters with religion.

Some key questions students will examine in this course:

- What is the nature of religious expression today?

- What is the function of the relationship between religion and society? culture? technology? politics?

- Does religion help human societies confront questions of our existence or purpose? How so?

- How or why is the anthropological study of religion valuable today?

Course Learning Outcomes

By the end of this course, students will be able to:

- Demonstrate a thorough knowledge of the major dimensions of sacred power, religious organizations and institutions, non-belief and secularity, as well as key stakeholders and practices of religion in Canadian and global society.

- Apply course materials (anthropological concepts and theories) to analyze the relationship between religion, culture, social relations, and politics.

- Utilize examples from their social environment to identify and assess contemporary religious issues that impact individuals, specific groups, or entire societies.

- Develop critical thinking skills and share opinions on religious issues in a respectful, constructive, non-judgmental and non-confrontational manner.

Requirements

Participation (10%)
Participation in this course is important since the course is not designed in the typical lecture format. I will begin each class with an overview of the week’s topic, as well as a discussion of the main concepts and ideas from course readings, however the majority of class time will be spent in discussion or engaging in learning activities. Students will actively work through course content and case studies to apply what they have read to contemporary religious issues. As such, it is important to prepare for class by completing all of the weekly readings and attending all classes.

Critical Reflection Papers (or CRPs 15%)
CRPs are intended to assess students’ ability to think critically about a particular week’s topic and readings. A critical reflection is NOT a summary of the assigned readings. Instead, students will submit a 2 page max (double-spaced) reflection that incorporates their understanding of the main concepts, theories, and ideas from a particular week’s topic or readings. As well as provide one example, illustration, or practical application of that week’s topic as found in contemporary encounters with religious issues or practices.

Students may select which in-class days they would like to submit their CRPs based on their own interests, schedule, and commitments. There are a total of 3 CRPs (valued at 5% each) that students must submit to obtain the full 15%. CRPs are due during the class for which that particular week’s topic/readings are scheduled. For example, if a student chooses to submit a CRP on mediated religion, technology, and pop culture this CRP is due in class on November 27th (week 10)—the day on which we will cover the topic of mediated religion, technology, and pop culture. As a contemporary example, students might choose to examine the intersection of religion, faith, and social media such as Facebook: If Facebook was a religion. Every effort will be made to return CRPs, with detailed feedback, within one week of submission.

Wherever possible students should reference (in-text) assigned readings for the week and submit a reference page in APA format at the end of their assignment (not included toward the 2 page requirement). Students must include references for outside materials (news articles, web resources, videos, podcasts, social media posts, etc.). This will allow students to practice their citation skills, and receive feedback ahead of their final paper.

Observation Assignment (35%) DUE October 30th

Working individually students will choose a sacred space/place to observe sacred power in action. While the site of observation does not need to be a traditional or typical religious institution it should meet the basic tenets of our course definition for religion/religious organization. Students are encouraged to choose a sacred space/place that they are not familiar with or that is different from their own religious affiliation, if they have one, so that they can expand their religious knowledge base. It is strongly recommended that you have either the instructor or the T.A. approve your site of observation before conducting your observations.

Observations MUST consist of at least one site visit for a couple of hours. However, students may choose to visit the site more than once. The site visit should occur during ‘open or public’ hours. If possible students should attend a service, celebration, or practice of ritual (for example, a church service or prayer service). Following the observations students will record written field notes of their observations and write their reflection paper based on these notes.

Students will submit a 5-7 page reflection paper based on their observations. Reflections will include any basic information regarding the religious organization that students observed (for example, the type and name of institution if applicable, where it is located, and if a particular service, rite, or ritual was observed). Students will then address a series of reflection questions found in the detailed assignment instructions provided on CULEarn. Reflection papers should be 12 point, times new roman font, and double-spaced. There is no reference page needed for this assignment as it is based on your observations. Students must submit their rough field notes along with their reflection papers.

Final Paper (40%) DUE December 8th (Last class)

The final paper will be a summative evaluation for this course which means that it is cumulative—covering all course material. Drawing on course material (readings, theories, approaches, concepts, in-class activities ETC.) and a contemporary case example, students will answer one of the following essay questions:

I) Is religion a relevant social institution today? Why or why not?
II) How does religion help human societies confront moral or ethical dilemmas? Utilize a contemporary case example in your response (for example, doctor assisted suicide).
III) How has religion adapted to processes of globalization such as modernization, urbanization, pluralization, and technicization? Has institutional religion been successful in this adaptation?

Note: the instructor may add an additional paper question(s) if our discussions in class deem this to be relevant. Any additional final paper options will be circulated before the question approval date of November 13th **

Students must submit their final paper question and thesis statement in class by November 13th. It is highly recommended that students discuss their paper outlines and thesis statements with either the instructor or T.A. during office hours.
*Final papers will be between 10-12 pages in length and will utilize a minimum of 5 course readings. A reference page, following proper APA format, is required and is not included in the 10-12 page limit.

Detailed final paper instructions along with a grading rubric will be posted on CULearn

- FND = (Failed, no Deferred) = Student could not pass the course even with 100% on final exam

Academic Regulations, Accommodations, Plagiarism, Etc.

University rules regarding registration, withdrawal, appealing marks, and most anything else you might need to know can be found on the university’s website, here:

Academic Accommodations for Students with Disabilities

The Paul Menton Centre for Students with Disabilities (PMC) provides services to students with Learning Disabilities (LD), psychiatric/mental health disabilities, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD), chronic medical conditions, and impairments in mobility, hearing, and vision. If you have a disability requiring academic accommodations in this course, please contact PMC at 613-520-6608 or pmc@carleton.ca for a formal evaluation. If you are already registered with the PMC, contact your PMC coordinator to send me your Letter of Accommodation at the beginning of the term, and no later than two weeks before the first in-class scheduled test or exam requiring accommodation (if applicable). After requesting accommodation from PMC, meet with me to ensure accommodation arrangements are made. Please consult the PMC website for the deadline to request accommodations for the formally-scheduled exam (if applicable).

The deadlines for contacting the Paul Menton Centre regarding accommodation for final exams for the December 2017 exam period is November 10, 2017 and for the April 2018 exam period is March 9, 2018.

For Religious Obligations

Students requesting academic accommodation on the basis of religious obligation should make a formal, written request to their instructors for alternate dates and/or means of satisfying academic requirements. Such requests should be made during the first two weeks of class, or as soon as possible after the need for accommodation is known to exist, but no later than two weeks before the compulsory event.

Accommodation is to be worked out directly and on an individual basis between the student and the instructor(s) involved. Instructors will make accommodations in a way that avoids academic disadvantage to the student. Students or instructors who have questions or want to confirm accommodation eligibility of a religious event or practice may refer to the Equity Services website for a list of holy days and Carleton’s Academic Accommodation policies, or may contact an Equity Services Advisor in the Equity Services Department for assistance.

For Pregnancy
Pregnant students requiring academic accommodations are encouraged to contact an Equity Advisor in Equity Services to complete a letter of accommodation. The student must then make an appointment to discuss her needs with the instructor at least two weeks prior to the first academic event in which it is anticipated the accommodation will be required.

Plagiarism
Plagiarism is the passing off of someone else's work as your own and is a serious academic offence. For the details of what constitutes plagiarism, the potential penalties and the procedures refer to the section on Instructional Offences in the Undergraduate Calendar.

What are the Penalties for Plagiarism?
A student found to have plagiarized an assignment may be subject to one of several penalties including: expulsion; suspension from all studies at Carleton; suspension from full-time studies; and/or a reprimand; a refusal of permission to continue or to register in a specific degree program; academic probation; award of an FNS, Fail, or an ABS.

What are the Procedures?
All allegations of plagiarism are reported to the faculty of Dean of FASS and Management. Documentation is prepared by instructors and/or departmental chairs. The Dean writes to the student and the University Ombudsperson about the alleged plagiarism. The Dean reviews the allegation. If it is not resolved at this level then it is referred to a tribunal appointed by the Senate.

Plagiarism and cheating at the graduate level are viewed as being particularly serious and the sanctions imposed are accordingly severe. Students are expected to familiarize themselves with and follow the Carleton University Student Academic Integrity Policy (See http://www2.carleton.ca/sasc/advisingcentre/academic-integrity/). The Policy is strictly enforced and is binding on all students. Plagiarism and cheating – presenting another's ideas, arguments, words or images as your own, using unauthorized material, misrepresentation, fabricating or misrepresenting research data, unauthorized co-operation or collaboration or completing work for another student – weaken the quality of the graduate degree. Academic dishonesty in any form will not be tolerated. Students who infringe the Policy may be subject to one of several penalties including: expulsion; suspension from all studies at Carleton; suspension from full-time studies; a refusal of permission to continue or to register in a specific degree program; academic probation; or a grade of Failure in the course.
