COURSE DESCRIPTION / INSTRUCTOR'S STATEMENT

The course description has changed slightly from the Carleton calendar due to COVID-19 distancing requirements.

This capstone course is an opportunity for Honours students in SICS to bring together the knowledge and skills developed during their degrees to conceptualize and carry out their own substantial research projects within a guided and collective context. Students refine and practice their analytic and research skills to apply interdisciplinary theoretical and methodological approaches to their selected research projects. They learn how to carry them out from concept to completion.

This will be a blended online course mixing synchronous meetings and asynchronous activities.

Prerequisite(s): CDNS 3000 and fourth-year standing in Canadian Studies or permission of the School of Indigenous and Canadian Studies.

EVALUATION (subject to change)

weekly and biweekly written and oral assignments 35%
research proposal 15%
final research paper 30%
participation 20%
