COURSE DESCRIPTION / INSTRUCTOR'S STATEMENT

This course engages with diverse theoretical perspectives and empirical research to critically analyze Canada's relation to the global world. How do Canada and Canadians respond to and address pressing global challenges such as climate change, the global refugee crisis, peace keeping, pandemics, global inequalities, food insecurity, etc.? What values and principles have Canada and Canadians portrayed and spread as global actors? How have they changed throughout history? How do Canadians play their role as global citizens? In this course, we examine the practices of diverse Canadian actors working globally including the Canadian government, Canadian foreign aid agencies, Canadian companies and individual Canadians, and critically analyze the impacts of these actors on both Canadian and global communities.

As a fourth-year seminar course, my role will be more of a facilitator to assist you to successfully develop your research and analytical skills and to encourage your active participation in glocal (local and global) communities through assigned readings, discussions with your peers, a presentation and a final project. A high value is placed on inclusive and communal learning with your peers.
