Canada is working on a new Arctic Policy Framework to establish priorities for a vibrant and sustainable North; the latest in a series of policies for the Canadian Arctic since the Cold War. What is new about this policy framework and what will it take to get results? Join us for this interactive event between northerners, public service officials and academics on the themes that have guided the Framework’s development, the governance needed for successful implementation, and how we will know if the Framework is delivering its intended benefits.
